

Note in bottle reaches Nixon

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (AP) — Walking on a deserted beach in the Bahamas, President Nixon found a green-tinged bottle washed ashore amid the seaweed, carrying a message inside.

It had to be broken open to get at the somewhat waterlogged note that read:

"I'm aboard the U.S.S. Guam. I have a watch. I had nothing to do so I'm writing you... if you find it please write to this address and tell them you found this message from their grandson."

The White House checked out the letter from Larry Metivier after the President found it on his weekend beach stroll with his friends C. G. "Bebe" Rebozo and Robert Abblanap during a visit to Grand Cay in the Bahamas and found the young man was air man apprentice with a Navy helicopter squadron and had been aboard the Guam being transported from Norfolk, Va., to his present post at Jacksonville, Fla.

Then Sunday night — which happened to be Armed Forces Day — the President made a telephone call to Larry's grandfather, William L. Staples of Havertown, Pa., whose name and address were on the message that was dated March 23 — almost two months ago.

Nixon told about finding the message, and according to a White House spokesman, a somewhat startled grandfather said of his message-writing grandson: "He's a good boy — he's a fine boy. He didn't do anything wrong did he." The President assured Staples that the call from the nation's commander-in-chief didn't involve any trouble, and Nixon said he was proud of the Navy and all the men who serve in it, a White House spokesman related.

He wished Staples well and told him to inform his grandson Larry that the note had been found.

Pat Hearst hunted as 'terrorist'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Patricia Hearst, the soft-spoken coed who screamed "let me go" as she was violently kidnaped 3½ months ago, was hunted today by hundreds of lawmen as an "armed and extremely dangerous" member of the terrorist group which abducted her.

With six of Miss Hearst's alleged captors dead after a series of weekend developments in which the case began to break open, the FBI led a blitzing search in this city today for the remnants of the nearly decimated Symbionese Liberation Army, and for Miss Hearst.

The FBI said Sunday night it would charge Miss Hearst as the woman who pumped automatic rifle fire into a sporting goods store on Thursday, the incident that triggered the army of lawmen into action as they began to close in on the SLA.

The FBI said it believes Miss Hearst, who 106 days ago was pursuing her art studies and quietly planning a summer wedding, to be part of what is left of her captors.

"Apparently she has joined forces with the SLA," William A. Sullivan, assistant director of the Los Angeles FBI office, said of the 20-year-old newspaper heiress Sunday night. He added:

"She will be given the opportunity to surrender. If she opens fire on FBI agents or police, the fire will be returned."

Police said early today all units were seeking a young white woman and two black men "considered armed and dangerous and may be suspected SLA members" who tried to offer "several hundred dollars" to a landlady if she would give them a room Sunday night.

The woman was described as 18 to 20, blonde hair, blue eyes, with a sawed-off shotgun on a sling concealed under her coat. Miss Hearst has brown hair and brown eyes. The men were described as in their 20s, one 6-foot-3 and the other 5-foot-4.

Police said when the landlady refused to rent the room, she was slashed at with a knife. Her clothing was cut but she was unharmed. Her assailants reportedly fled in a red and black sedan.

Named in a warrant charging federal firearms violations were Miss Hearst and William and Emily Harris, a husband and wife in their late 20s. The Harrises are white. Authorities said they were the only three persons still sought because of the SLA, the small band of terrorists who pushed their stated goal of revolution after claiming to have kidnaped Miss Hearst on Feb. 4.

If there was any solid SLA connection with the two black men sought early today, police did not give it.

Six persons, including acknowledged SLA leader Cinque, are dead, victims of a Friday night shootout with an estimated 500 law officers that lasted more than an hour before their hideout house burned. When the charred remains of all six were finally identified by Sunday afternoon, the dead included what was believed to be all the top leaders of the SLA, which now appears to have never numbered more than a dozen.

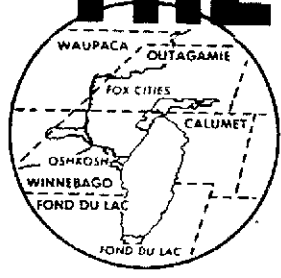

In tape recordings issued as the country's first political kidnapping unfolded, Miss Hearst pledged her allegiance to the SLA, renounced her family, ridiculed her fiancé and repeated the violent SLA goals of revolution on behalf of the people. But her family always said it believed the statements were coerced. Most authorities appeared to believe that, until this weekend.

Formal complaints were to be filed today against Miss Hearst and the Harrises, who Sullivan said he believed were still in Southern California. A youth who identified Miss Hearst for the FBI said she told him she raked a sporting goods store with rifle fire as she and the Harrises made their getaway after a bungled attempt to shoplift a pair of 49-cent socks.

Randolph A. Hearst, Patricia's father, was "taking it pretty badly" and was not expected to have any comment until later.

Newsman to testify for reporter

LOS ANGELES (AP) — TV anchorman Walter Cronkite and several other top reporters are testifying in support of a colleague who is risking another jail term in order to keep confidential news sources secret.

CBS anchorman Cronkite is one of several top reporters scheduled to appear at the court hearing which begins today to determine whether William Farr, a Los Angeles Times reporter who has served 46 days in jail, can be imprisoned again.

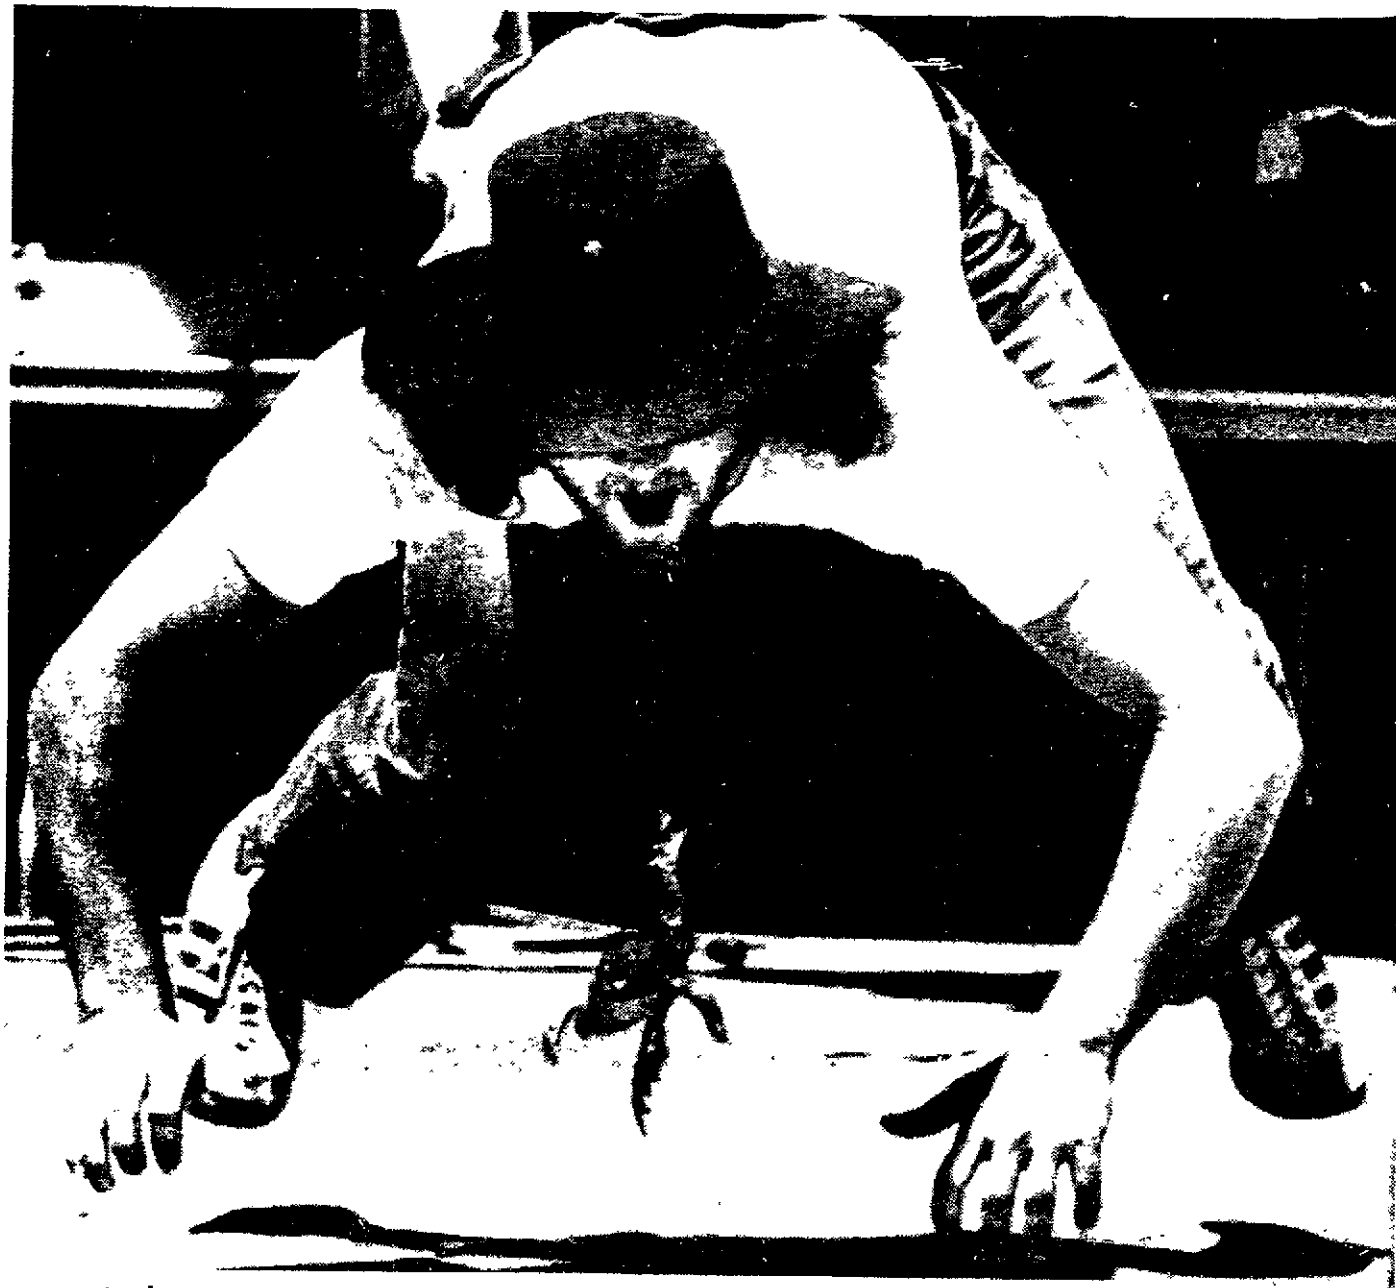

Farr's planned witness list also included NBC-TV White House correspondent Tom Brokaw, Los Angeles Times' Washington reporter Jack Nelson and New York Times' San Francisco bureau chief Wallace Turner. Nelson and Turner are Pulitzer Prize winners.

The issue on which they will be asked to testify is whether Farr, in refusing to reveal sources of a story during the Manson trial, was following an established ethical and moral principle of journalism.

The case, which has been in litigation more than three years, involves a demand by Manson trial judge Charles H. Older that Farr tell him which two of six attorneys in that trial violated a court order by giving Farr information for a story. Farr refused, saying he promised his sources confidentiality and could not break that trust.

Further complicating the situation, the six attorneys took the stand before Superior Court Judge Older and swore they were not the sources. This made two of them eligible for perjury charges if Farr named them.

With Older running against two opponents for re-election and one of the attorneys a candidate for the state Democratic attorney general nomination, the case also has become a political issue.

Kissinger working on last details

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Details of a general agreement to separate Israeli and Syrian forces on the Golan Heights began trickling out today as Secretary of State Henry Kissinger arrived for discussions with Syrian leaders to overcome the few remaining obstacles.

A senior American official said a buffer zone separating the two armies will vary in depth from less than half a mile to a little over one mile.

According to this official, Israel has agreed to permit Syrian policemen to re-enter towns and villages within the demilitarized zone along with Syrian civilians.

Newsman also were told on the one-hour flight from Jerusalem that verification of the thinning out of armor immediately behind the disengagement lines would not cause a problem because the distances involved are not great.

Now in the 22nd day of his marathon peace mission, Kissinger brought to Damascus Israel's approval of his proposals to separate the opposing forces, which the Israeli negotiating team gave Sunday.

The Syrians accepted the plan Saturday, making final agreement by the end of the week appear a certainty.

With agreement on the troublesome question of a separation line, the focus of negotiations now is expected to shift toward subsidiary problems like the composition of a United Nations contingent to man a buffer zone between the opposing forces, the thinning out of firepower and an exchange of war prisoners.

Kissinger said he expected to remain in the Middle East at least until Friday, shuttling almost daily between the two countries. He scheduled his eighth session today with Syrian President Hafez Assad and Foreign Minister Abdel Halim Khaddam in Damascus.

He returns to Jerusalem in the evening to meet with Premier Golda Meir and other Israeli leaders.

"You can assume this will be the pattern" over the next few days, said Robert Anderson, a State Department spokesman.

Informed sources said the Kissinger compromise centered on U.N. control of the peak of Mt. Hermon, with Israeli and Syrian units maintaining positions along the slopes. It also was said to include the return of the city of Quneitra to Syrian civilian authority and Israeli withdrawal from three abandoned Arab villages in the Quneitra area, which is just behind the cease-fire lines drawn after the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

The sources said that under the plan, the United States would help guard against violations by using satellites and other means to inspect Israeli and Syrian troop movements and equipment in the contested region.

Watch over endangered species

Among the animals

Keith Parcher, deputy chief of operations, law enforcement division, of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, stands among property seized because of violations of the endangered species laws. (AP Wirephoto)

WASHINGTON (AP) — The old Duck Cop of the Fish and Wildlife Service is turning into a sort of environmental G-Man.

Instead of big heroin or 10-most-wanted busts, the big case around the service's Law Enforcement Division is likely to be seizure of a cheetah-fur coat or a shipment of hawksbill turtle shell hair clips.

That's because the main beat for the division's 220 special agents is policing the endangered species list — and agents believe their beat is starting to involve organized crime.

The traffic in illicit fur, shell and feather from species on the lengthy list is approaching dope-scale profits.

A single eagle tail feather is worth $50. A tiger skin coat recently was valued at $80,000. A pair of Nile crocodile shoes is worth $125, and a live peregrine falcon can be worth $10,000 to a falconry buff, the service says.

The division's stepped-up effort, says Director Clark Bavan, "has been necessary in part to focus on the large-scale traffickers and smugglers of wildlife."

The attraction for organized crime — besides the money — is the lesser risk, along with the comparatively light penalties Congress provided in its endangered species laws, says division Deputy Director Bertram Falbaum.

"If you can get $50,000, $100,000, $200,000, dealing in misdemeanor instead of felony crimes, why not," says Falbaum. "We're convinced organized crime is involved."

Falbaum declines to give specifics, saying several cases are under investigation. But, he says, organized crime's role likely involves financing big fur buys and shipments.

To get on with its new responsibilities, the division is recruiting a mix of ex-FBI,

Customs Bureau, police and military intelligence men. Falbaum used to run Customs' Operation Intercept against narcotics traffic on the West Coast.

Agents' training combines law enforcement techniques with cram courses on how to look at a shoe and say if it's made of American alligator, caiman, orinoco or Nile crocodile.

In the old days, the division was heavy with biologists and game warden-types who banded ducks and stalked hunters who shot more than their limit — thus the tag, Duck Cops.

But in recent years Congress has tightened up several species protection laws and added new ones, giving the added enforcement tasks to the division.

Under a law that went into effect in December, the sale of endangered species or their byproducts across state lines largely is illegal.

There are exceptions in the law, but it's possible that an ocelot-fur coat on sale in a department store, or even the egret feathers in a floral spray may be illegally offered.

Part of the time, agents say, a store owner will not know that he is trafficking in illegal goods.

An injunction the division won against the B. Altman and Cartier stores in New York banned further sale of tortoise shell jewelry, but also required the stores to instruct their employees three times yearly of the type of wildlife products they were to avoid stocking.

So far the service has confiscated goods worth $2 million by its estimate. The haul includes one stuffed Andean condor, 20,000 cans of sperm whale meat and 1,200 pairs of Nile crocodile shoes. Some 1,400 live alligator-like caimans are cooling it in a zoo until a division case against their shippers is settled.

Ehrlichman count might be dropped

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge, saying the FBI "plays cat and mouse" with people it is investigating today indicated he is considering dismissing one charge brought against former presidential aide John D. Ehrlichman in the White House Plumbers case.

U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell raised the question in reference to a charge that Ehrlichman lied to the FBI about his knowledge of the White House Plumbers unit's investigation of the Pentagon Papers case.

Gesell said that an FBI memo summarizing the interview with Ehrlichman did not make it clear whether the agent asked Ehrlichman about the "Pentagon Papers case" or, more specifically, about the break-in at the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

Ehrlichman told the FBI more than a year had elapsed since he had seen papers relating to the Pentagon Papers investigation. Gesell said that might have been correct if Ehrlichman was referring to the original case brought against Ellsberg.

Ehrlichman and five others were indicted by a grand jury on March 7, 1974 on charges of conspiring to violate the civil rights of Dr. Louis Fielding, a Beverly Hills psychiatrist who had treated Ellsberg.

The Plumbers unit allegedly engineered the break-in in an attempt to put together a psychological profile of Ellsberg. Ellsberg was then under indictment on charges stemming from the leak of the Pentagon Papers.

In addition, Ehrlichman was indicted on one count of lying to the FBI and three counts of lying to the grand jury.

The other defendants are Charles W. Colson, former White House special counsel; Felipe de Diego, a Cuban exile now living in Miami, and three Watergate conspirators, G. Gordon Liddy, Bernard L. Barker and Eugenio R. Martinez.

Meanwhile, Watergate was said to be hurting Republican fund raising efforts, and President Nixon's chief of staff Alexander M. Haig Jr. was quoted as saying he was so disturbed by the transcripts of the Watergate tapes that he had to reevaluate his job.

Haig, however, denied the Newsweek report through an aide as "totally false."

"Gen. Haig has never implied the need to re-evaluate his position and he challenges Newsweek to support this report," his associate said from the Florida White House at Key Biscayne.

The fund raising problems were discussed by Republican leaders in separate interviews Sunday.

Sen. William Brock, R-Tenn., chairman of the Senate Republican Campaign Committee, said, "I'm having a great deal of trouble raising money."

He was interviewed with Rep. Robert Michel, head of the House Republican Campaign Committee, on NBC's "Meet the Press." Both said Nixon should not resign even if impeached by the House.

GOP chairman George Bush, interviewed on ABC's "Issues and Answers," also said Nixon should not resign. The country, Bush said, "should leave aside political expediency and see the (impeachment) process through."

Michel also said he was "unalterably opposed" to resignation.

The main arguments before Gesell, to be heard Tuesday, will be whether the six men charged can use national security as a defense to the conspiracy charges. Gesell has said that if it can be proven foreign policy was involved he might have to dismiss the charges. Among those charged are former top Nixon aides John D. Ehrlichman and Charles W. Colson.

In another case, Judge Barrington Parker refused to dismiss a perjury indictment or transfer to a California court the perjury case involving Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke of California.

A three-count indictment returned April 3 accuses Reinecke of lying to a federal grand jury about certain details of his role in helping to arrange for the 1972 Republican national convention in San Diego, Calif. The convention later was shifted to Miami Beach, Fla.

At a pre-trial hearing last week, Reinecke's attorneys argued that he had been trapped and misled by Watergate prosecutors into believing he would not be indicted if he agreed to cooperate and testify.

In support of the motion to move the July 15 trial to San Francisco or Sacramento, Reinecke testified he could not afford to bring witnesses needed in his defense to Washington.

He opposes state controller Houston I. Flourney in the June 4 primary for governor and his attorneys in California have said he wants to get his trial over with before then.

John J. Sirica, the judge most involved in Watergate matters, also had a busy week ahead in four different areas.

He was expected to rule on whether President Nixon must turn over tape recordings of 64 conversations to special prosecutor Leon Jaworski, who has subpoenaed them for the Sept. 9 trial of seven Watergate cover-up defendants.

He also promised to release the long-awaited experts' report on causes of an 18½ minute gap in a tape surrendered earlier by the White House. The release depended on when the report, turned over to Sirica last week, was printed.

He was a World War I veteran.

Stormy, but much warmer

The month's pattern of cloudy skies and scattered showers isn't likely to change in the next 24 hours, but — for a change — there will be considerably higher temperatures along with the precipitation Tuesday.

The U.S. Weather Service in Green Bay said tonight's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies and a low of about 53 degrees. There is a 30 per cent chance of measurable precipitation tonight, in showers or thundershowers, with winds due at 6 to 12 m.p.h. from the south.

The high temperature Tuesday afternoon will be about 78, the weather service said, although there remains a 30 per cent chance of thundershowers. Southerly winds will increase to 12-22 m.p.h. Tuesday.

Highs today were expected to be in the high 60s to the upper 70s in the southwest portions of the state, bringing the state its first day of normal or above normal temperatures in more than a week.

The warming trend was expected to continue throughout the state Tuesday, with highs ranging into the low 80s in some sections.

The scattered rain was to continue through the week, with temperatures again likely to dip Thursday and Friday. High temperatures Sunday in Wisconsin ranged from 78 at Hudson down to 54 at Racine, while overnight lows ranged from 40 at Ashland to 57 at LaCrosse.

Appleton recorded a high of 67 degrees during the 24-hour period ending at 10 a.m. today, and an overnight low of 49. At 10 a.m., the readings included: barometer, 30.31 inches and rising; wind, southeast at 8 m.p.h.; relative humidity, 62 per cent and dew point, 46 degrees. There was no precipitation in the city in the last 24 hours.

Sunset today at 8:18 p.m. Sunrise tomorrow at 5:21 a.m. Moonrise tomorrow at 4:58 a.m. New Moon on May 21.

Confederate troops repulse a Union charge during a mock Civil War battle near Galena, Ill., Saturday, in a re-enactment of the Battle of Shelbyville Pike, which took place near Nashville, Tenn., during the Civil War.

Conservative wins in France

PARIS (AP) — Conservative Valéry Giscard d'Estaing, for years the strict finance minister in France's Gaullist government, has become the republic's 20th president in an election that could reduce friction between Paris and Washington. Latest official figures gave Giscard d'Estaing a lead of only 371,814 votes out of more than 26 million cast, more than 87 per cent of the registered voters in the largest turnout ever in a French election.

Interior Minister Jacques Chirac declared Giscard d'Estaing elected Sunday night with 50.71 per cent of the vote, 1.5 per cent more than that cast for Socialist Francois Mitterand in the runoff election.

Foreign policy played almost no role in the free-wheeling, six-week election campaign, as both candidates followed the theme of "national independence" for France with slight variations.

But the first foreign notable to congratulate the new president was President Nixon in a protocol-breaking personal telephone call, and French newspapers saw this as an augury of an easing in the recent prickly relations between the two nations.

Giscard d'Estaing has promised to make technical suggestions soon on European monetary problems and work towards eventual European unity in 1980.

He is known to be on good terms with Helmut Schmidt, the new chancellor of West Germany and a man who is said to be anxious to improve European relations with the United States.

The election pivoted on domestic issues, mainly France's severe economic house of the National Assembly to support his government.

Boy returned to his mother

VALDOSTA, Ga. (AP) — Danny Roy Ostrander, 7, apparently abandoned by his stepfather on Mother's Day, is back with his mother.

Ruth Vincent of Tampa, Fla., said she recognized her son, who she said has a history of epilepsy, in an Associated Press picture published in a Tampa newspaper Saturday. She was reunited with Danny here Sunday.

She said her estranged husband, Mickey A. Vincent, told her last Sunday that he was taking Danny and his 2-year-old sister for a picnic. The boy showed up that afternoon at a Valdosta house and said his father had let him out of a car with an assurance that he would be back to pick him up.

Danny stayed with a Valdosta family for the past week while investigators searched for his parents.

Mrs. Vincent said her daughter must still be with her stepfather. Vincent has not been located, and no charges have been placed against him.

problems. It also reflected apparent voter discontent with 16 years of Gaullist rule that ended with the death on April 20 of President Georges Pompidou.

Giscard d'Estaing and Mitterand eliminated the official Gaullist candidate, Jacques Chaban-Delmas, in the first ballot May 5. Chaban-Delmas received a humiliating 15 per cent of the vote.

Giscard d'Estaing still will have to rely on what now appears to be a disproportionately large Gaullist bloc in the lower

Simon has powerful friends in the Senate

WASHINGTON — A flanking attack by Roy Ash, the aggressive boss of the Office of Management and Budget (OMB), aimed at control of the administration's energy policy, seems doomed because of secret intervention by all six Republican members of the Senate Interior Committee.

The six Senators on April 9 wrote a private letter to President Nixon, personally delivering it to White House chief of staff Alexander Haig. The letter virtually demanded that William Simon, energy czar before he became Secretary of the Treasury May 8, be named to head a new National Energy Council. Creation of the council is opposed backstage by the powerful Ash, who wants to control energy from OMB.

The letter to Mr. Nixon, by intruding on an administration housekeeping decision and issuing close to an ultimatum, suggests drastic decline of White House power and influence. Beyond that, it points to Simon surviving the hard impeachment months ahead, insulated by Capitol Hill support. Flamboyant and politically oriented, Simon would have been doomed in the Nixon first term, when faceless factotums were the rule. But the requirements for survival have changed in Washington.

"At this crucial point in time," the Senators wrote the President, "we feel that Bill Simon should retain a central role in the development of energy policy... Congress has grown to rely on Simon as a central figure in energy and we feel this leadership must be continued."

Then, alluding to Mr. Nixon's delays in naming Simon to replace George Shultz, the letter pointedly stated that "we anticipate that he will be nominated to be Secretary of the Treasury and we wholeheartedly support that nomination."

Mr. Nixon cannot ignore this power play because of impeachment politics. Five of the six Senators are strong conservatives whose support the President must have in a Senate trial. They are Sens. Paul Fannin of Arizona, James McClure of Idaho, Dewey Bartlett of Oklahoma, Clifford Hansen of Wyoming and James Buckley of New York. The sixth is liberal Mark Hatfield of Oregon.

In pre-Watergate days when super aides H. R. Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman kept guard at the Nixon White House, senatorial intrusion into Oval Office housekeeping decisions would never have reached the President's notice. But Haig politely received the six Republicans, gave them all the time they wanted and promised to help.

Fannin gave the President another strong nudge when he rode Air Force One to Arizona with Mr. Nixon May 3. McClure told us he also had "made a second trip to the White House" to push the Simon-led Energy Council.

This effort, according to one of the Senators, is intended to circumvent Ash, who would automatically dominate federal energy matters from the White House if the council were not established. Behind it are two political factors—one personal, the other of immense importance as the Nixon White House watches its powers filter away in the bitter impeachment battle.

The personal factor: Simon, as viewed by Congress, proved his capacity for hard decisions and his instinct to cooperate with Congress during his energy czarship last winter, while Ash is regarded as remote, aloof and far more the President's own man. "Simon calls me Sundays, late at night and early in the morning," one Senator told us.

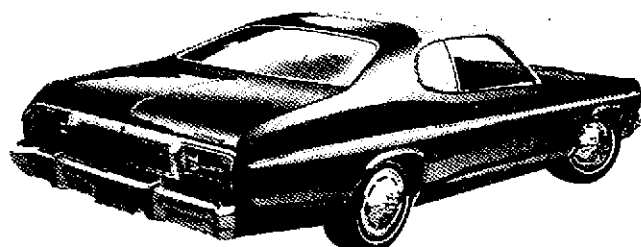

The more important factor goes to the heart of impeachment politics, with both Simon and the Senators moving into the unmapped territory of keeping the government running while Mr. Nixon fights for his life. With presidential power waning, only strong alliances between departments and their congressional allies can prevent a wholesale transfer of power from the administration to the Democratic-controlled Congress. If the Democrats sweep in Nov. 5 with a "veto proof" Congress, it could be catastrophic.

That explains the developing alliance between Simon and the six Republican Senators on control of energy policy. Simon is keeping his lines open to powerful Democrats such as Sen. Russell Long of Louisiana, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, and Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington, chairman of the Interior Committee. But he is also brilliantly courting his Republican allies to insulate his department during the impeachment battle. That is far more important today than being a court favorite in the Oval Office.

Conflicting reports offered on Haig's reaction to transcripts

NEW YORK (AP) — Newsweek magazine says White House Chief of Staff Alexander M. Haig Jr. was so upset by the Watergate tape transcripts that he told friends he had to "back up and re-evaluate" his job.

But in Key Biscayne, Fla., an associate of Haig said that report was "totally false."

Newsweek said Sunday that Haig's friends claim his White House position "troubles him deeply, that he is torn between loyalty to his boss and his own scrupulous standards."

Haig's associate replied that, "This report is an example of careless reporting and demonstrates just how out of touch Newsweek is with Gen. Haig's point of view and with White House thinking."

"Gen. Haig has never implied the need to re-evaluate his position and he challenges Newsweek to support this report."

Haig, 49, quit the Army as a four-star general to become top aide at the White House, and Newsweek said he still relishes most of the job. However, the news magazine said there have been indications that Haig is having second thoughts about his work.

Newsweek said one such indication was that Haig's defense of President Nixon seldom contains the aide's personal views, but usually consists of White House legal arguments that the President has committed no impeachable offense.

It said another sign of Haig's rethinking came after the release of the tape transcripts, when, the magazine said, Haig told one of its reporters, "I'm not proud of them."

Haig expressed the hope that the transcripts would not be taken as "characteristic" of all White House conversations, said Newsweek.

"But privately, he has told friends that the cynicism and disloyalty revealed in the tapes disturbed him so deeply that he had to back up and re-evaluate his job," said Newsweek.

"Even his jokes are etched in acid," the magazine said, quoting Haig as saying, "If I've got a swell of head it's from bruises and not from ego."

The article quoted Haig as saying he is a "historical phenomenon — the first active-duty general who had to retire from military service to enter combat."

Kennedy paid taxes of $217,844 for 1973

BOSTON (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy paid $217,844 in federal income taxes on an unadjusted gross income of $461,444 in 1973, according to tax records he disclosed to two Boston newspapers.

The Boston Herald American and the Boston Globe today published the joint tax return filed by Kennedy and his wife, Joan, reporting the Massachusetts Democrat's income beyond his congressional salary of $42,500.

Kennedy's income included $21,567 in dividends, $270,080 from the Joseph P. Kennedy 1926 trust, $126,257 from the Joseph P. Kennedy 1936 trust, $3,355 from publications, speaking fees and miscellaneous sources and $1,623 from four oil wells in Texas and Louisiana owned by the Forest Oil Co. The late Joseph P. Kennedy was the senator.

He also said he paid $11,351 in real estate taxes, $64 in gasoline taxes, $362 in general sales taxes and $648 in taxes on personal properties.

Kennedy used the tax form's checkoff to contribute $1 of his taxes to the political campaign fund and listed $25, the maximum amount allowable, for contributions to political candidates.

Kennedy declined to be immediately quoted about his tax returns, but said the data was released because of the public's growing concern about the extra income of elected officials.

King of Sikkim says wife fled for life

NEW DELHI, India — The king of Sikkim says his queen, former debutante Hope Cooke, moved back to New York after being called an American spy by opposition politicians.

But King Palden Thondup, 49, said Sunday he hopes his wife will return to Sikkim one day.

Miss Cooke, 33, left the country a few months after an uprising in April 1973 reduced the king from undisputed ruler to a figurehead.

Solzhenitsyn's former priest in trouble

MOSCOW (AP) — Things aren't going very well for Alexander Solzhenitsyn's former priest and confessor.

Father Dmitri Dudkov was arrested Saturday night for refusing to obey an order by the Russian Orthodox patriarch to discontinue what were considered dissident sermons. On Sunday, he was no longer curate of the Nikolsky church, where he had been preaching for 15 years.

race for the 127-member House of Representatives, while Bill Snedden's Liberal-Country party coalition had 57. Six seats were undecided. The old House had 125 seats, 67 held by Labor.

Most analysts predicted the final results — which may not be known for several days — will give Labor a majority of one to three seats. The leader of the majority party or coalition in the House becomes prime minister and forms the government.

In the tight race for the Senate, the experts predicted Labor may take from 29 to 32 of the 60 seats. It held 26 in the old Senate.

Snedden, 47, had forged his campaign on what he saw as voter discontent over the country's 14 per cent inflation rate. He refused to concede the election by Sunday night, although he said Labor appeared to be winning a majority.

Snedden said Labor's lack of a big margin, and its apparent loss of seats, was a warning light to Whitlam.

Five receive scholarships

Five high school seniors have been selected to receive $250 college scholarships from the Outagamie County Deputy Sheriffs Association.

James Davis, chairman of the scholarship committee, identified the recipients as Joseph Coenen of Dale, a student at New London High School; Daniel G. Kaniess, 5240 W. Prospect Ave., Appleton, Fox Valley Lutheran High School; Jeffrey M. Jirschele, 2018 N. Owaissa St., Appleton High School East, and Stephen J. Hinkens, 215 Ravine St. and Randall J. Spierings, 1000 Polk Ave., both students at Little Chute High School.

Selections were made on the basis of financial need, participation in school and outside activities and scholastic abilities, according to Davis.

The deputy sheriffs association began its annual scholarship program in 1972 with the selection of two students.

Scholarship money consists of proceeds from the association's annual stage circus. Other proceeds from the fund raising event are used largely to finance programs for needy and handicapped children.

Puppet show has comic strip actors

BY CAPPY DICK

A cardboard carton theater, with comic strip actors on sticks, is a good stay-at-home fun-project.

Find a cardboard or corrugated board box to use as the stage (Figure 3). Remove the top to make the stage opening when the box is placed on its side. In what will then be the bottom of the stage, cut a slot an inch and a half wide and almost as long as the full length of the box. The actors-on-sticks will be held up through this slot as in Figure 3.

Paint the inside of the box black, and on the back wall paste a scenic picture clipped from a magazine. With glue or small tacks, fasten a piece of cloth at each side of the stage to give it the appearance of having a curtain.

Choose the actors from your favorite comic strips. Figures that are standing, walking or running will be best. Figure 1 shows a typical character. Paste the figures on cardboard and cut them out. Fasten each one to a stick with adhesive tape as in Figure 2.

Place the stage on two chairs, one end on the edge of each chair. This will allow free space between the chairs for you to manipulate the sticks as in Figure 3. Think up things for the actors to say as you move them about from beneath the stage. PA Tomorrow: How to play a game called "The ghost groans."

International flavor adds spice to potluck

LOVE IS...AFS! That was the theme of the second AFS International Connection Talent Show held Thursday night in the Appleton High School-East auditorium.

AFS Winter Program students, Americans Abroad Returnees, and this year's Americans Abroad candidates joined families, friends, student club and chapter members from the Fox Valley and Winnebago American Field Service districts for a potluck supper before the event.

AFSers talent presentation consisted of songs sung in Finnish, Vietnamese, Italian, and French; interpretations of slides from Austria and Germany; "Indonesian" juggling; a Japanese classical piano arrangement; talks on Sweden, Denmark and New Zealand.

An International Fellowship student and a Rotary exchange student sang a Mexican duet.

American Field Service International Scholarship and Americans Abroad students will leave the area and the United States next month — some to return to their own families in their native lands, others to live with a new family and experience the culture and customs of a country in another part of the world.

Book on sewing published for blind

When Adele Brown answered the doorbell and the salesman asked if her mother were home, she decided it was time to get rid of her little girl dresses, and to sew some new clothes that matched her stature as a wife and homemaker.

Adele Brown faced a problem. She is blind and there were no sewing patterns she could use. She asked her neighbor to help her learn to sew, and the two of them developed techniques that eventually made it possible for Adele Brown not only to sew, but to teach other blind and visually impaired to sew.

That was 20 years ago. Today, Adele Brown together with the Catholic Guild for the Blind, Chicago, Ill., announce the publication of "So What About Sewing," the first sewing book for blind and visually impaired persons. "So What About Sewing" is printed in braille and large type and is a thorough guide and a handy reference work which contains instructions for the beginner as well as those with sewing experience.

The book contains techniques for sewing by hand as well as by machine. There are instructions for cutting, ripping, pinning, following and making patterns, sewing darts, installing zippers, collars, belts, etc.

It helps overcome the barriers of the visually impaired in the area of sewing. It guides the sewer through all the phases of making a garment to the final fitting of the finished product.

"So What About Sewing" is part of the Guild's on-going program to encourage active participation by the blind and visually impaired.

The book is available at less than cost from the Guild. To order a copy specify the braille or large print edition both of which consist of two volumes. Enclose a check or money order for $8 to the Catholic Guild for the Blind, 67 W. Division St., Chicago, Ill. 60610.

Divorce isn't instant freedom

"We don't know how to prevent a bad marriage, but we can help once it happens," says Sam Stellman of Social Services at the University of Wisconsin-Extension in Madison.

Stellman trains marriage and divorce counselors working with the courts in Wisconsin. He recently established the Family Life Center in Racine, a place where people can walk in and get help for problems related to marriage and divorce.

Most people only think of the day of the divorce, they do not think of the days after when they face life alone. But they should, says Stellman, for divorce is not instant freedom.

Though the person has changed because of the divorce, there are still hangovers from previous days, as well as new problems to contend with. The major function of divorce counseling is to put it all together and help the people deal with the problems so he or she can start a new and better life.

Piled up bitterness and hostility, often about trivial things, comes rushing out when a couple seeks divorce. This anger is coupled with concerns about how to deal with the children and money problems.

Because there is never enough money after divorce, the woman must usually find a job or look for a better paying one. For this reason, employment representatives are often included in divorce counseling.

Loneliness is another dimension of the divorce crisis.

You need someone to fall back on when you are lonely, Stellman says. He suggests finding one true friend, someone you know you can call any time of the day or night and they will listen.

Counseling dealing with these kinds of problems has been extremely helpful to people seeking divorce, and in Wisconsin, it is offered when divorce papers are filed with the family court.

The counselor determines if there is still a marriage left that is worth saving. If there is none, he or she offers divorce counseling. Since this type of service has become available, the reconciliation rate for those seeking divorce has jumped one-third over previous years.

However, there are no figures available yet on how stable or long lasting those reconciliations were.

Counseling is helpful, too, for those who have no marriage worth saving. Most often only the woman will seek or accept divorce counseling. This is OK, says Stellman. It is only a myth that both partners must come in together.

"We counsel people who happen to be married, not the marriage. If we can't save the marriage, we try to save the spouse," he says.

Divorce doesn't mean failure. And with the help of counseling, people can often make the adjustments to a new single way of life with fewer costly emotional or financial hassles.

Research sheds light on causes of divorce

"Divorce is no longer an uncommon event—something that happens only to people you don't know. Today two in five marriages end in divorce."

But the old question still remains. Why?

According to Sam Stellman, UW-Extension, recent research into divorce statistics is beginning to shed some light on the subject.

In a recent study done in various counties throughout the state, it was learned that the highest number of divorces are filed for when school starts in September.

The second highest time for divorce filings is the second week after Christmas. The third is after a three-day weekend, and the fourth is after a snowstorm.

It seems as though togetherness may not be the best thing for the future of a marriage, Stellman says. These statistics also pose questions concerning the father's role. What is he doing, or not doing with his wife and children that causes so much tension?

It is interesting to note that more and more men are now filing for the divorce. This used to be a woman's role, says Stellman, but now the number of men filing the papers has risen from six to 12 per cent in Racine alone.

Once the man and woman separate, their chances of getting back together again depend on how long they are apart. If they live alone for six weeks, there is little chance they will ever reconcile. And if the man has a new girlfriend, or the woman has a boyfriend, they will probably never get back together again.

Changing attitudes and values in our society, and too early marriages are two of the biggest factors that bring on divorce, says Stellman.

Families have more tension now than ever before.

Problems arise out of not enough money and "fuzzy roles."

The women's movement has had a tremendous, mostly positive, affect on roles within the family. Women now see themselves as persons in their own right, thinking about what they want, rather than continually making adjustments within the family setting, says Stellman.

But this is also causing problems for the marriage because it is hard for many men to accept the "new" woman.

Current research has also brought new evidence to support grandmother's contention that early marriages are often doomed to failure. Fifty to 60 per cent of all teenage marriages end in divorce. However, once the couple reaches their early 20s the divorce rate is cut in half.

It just makes sense, insists Stellman, that young people should hold off on marriage.

When asked why they don't wait, even with such strong evidence, he replied, "Kids aren't futuristic. They don't care about tomorrow. They want things to happen now."

Ann Landers

Don't step on rusty nails!

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a male high school student, age 18, and I happen to enjoy kicking off my shoes and going barefoot. I never wear shoes when I'm at home and I remove them often when I'm in public.

I can't explain why, but I really get turned on running barefoot across parks and lawns, especially on rainy summer days when people are walking their dogs. I know this isn't everyone's bag, but it happens to be mine.

What I can't understand is the hostility that some people show to my lifestyle. I've been reprimanded in school several times because of this. One teacher telephoned my mother to discuss "the problem."

I think it's ridiculous. After all, who am I hurting? I graduate in June and I would just love to walk up on the stage in my stocking feet and receive my diploma. What kind of reaction do you think it would create?—Shoeless Joe

Dear Joe: After the streaking that's gone on all over the country, a guy in stocking feet wouldn't even be noticed. Enjoy yourself, Bub, but don't step on any glass, rusty nails, or whatever people might step on in parks where dogs are walked.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a woman 40 years of age and have had to shave my chin and moustache ever since I was 19. I have tried the hair removers available in drug stores, but they never worked for me.

After I married, I took some electrolysis, but it wasn't worth the time and money because half of the hairs grew back in. So my solution is shaving. Although it's a nuisance, it's the most effective way to rid myself of unsightly facial hair.

Now our daughter, age 15, shows signs of having the same problem. I am sick about it and so is she. I need to know if this condition of hair on the face is caused by a glandular imbalance that might be corrected by medication or surgery. Please tell me what to do if our daughter continues to grow more facial hair. Is there anything new in this field or should she just shave, as I do?—No Name Please

Dear N.N.: Your daughter has apparently inherited your glandular structure and nothing can be done to reverse it.

Electrolysis is still the best method for permanently removing unsightly facial hair. But it must be done by an expert. Some of the hairs are sure to grow back, but they can be destroyed on the second go-round. With time, patience fortitude and money, hopefully, your daughter can emerge into womanhood with a clear, smooth complexion. (Copyright 1974)

Anthropologist to speak on women in society

A Lawrence University anthropologist will examine the roles of women in various societies at 7 p.m. in the Mary E. Morton Women's Center in Coleman Hall at the university.

Dr. Lorraine Zimmerman's talk, "Male-Female Authority Patterns from a Cross-Cultural Perspective," will be sponsored by the university's Downer Council and will be open to the public. Zimmerman is assistant professor of anthropology at Lawrence.

Among the questions she will consider are, "Are there any societies in which women have dominant roles of authority?" and "Can the examination of animal behavior or life in simple societies help us to understand why so few women in a society as complex as ours assume positions of economic or political authority?"

'Go check your cucumbers'

It was one of those days when your youngest falls around the house and says, "There's nothing to do." And while you're going through the sewing machine drawer looking for a meat thermometer you bought three years ago, a package of cucumber seeds falls out. And you say what any mother who has watched 12 years of Captain Kangaroo would say. "Why don't you go out and plant cucumber seeds?"

It happened to me last spring and I offer it up to other unstable mothers who might be tempted to believe that a kid digging in the dirt is worth two hanging around your ankle.

The "go check your cucumbers" trick kept the child busy for the better part of two months. For every "There's nothing to do," I had an answer: "Go water your cucumbers. Go look for worms on your cucumbers. Go dig around your cucumbers, or go measure your cucumbers."

Then one day he said, "There's nothing to do," and I said, "Why don't you go pick your cucumbers?" Minutes later, little Luther Burbank dragged into the kitchen a huge wastebasket of cucumbers. And another. And another. And another.

For the next week and a half I gave up a successful career as a writer to become a pickle canner who was busier than a mosquito at a streaker's festival. I bought glass jars with the right lids but the wrong rubbers. Back to the store for the right rubbers, but the wrong salt. Back for the right salt and the wrong vinegar. Back for the right vinegar and the wrong size pot.

Within a day or so I had it all together and we set about canning pickles.

I used to like pickles. As a kid my mother didn't dare set them on the table until we were ready to sit down. When I was expecting a baby I used to eat them until my teeth puckered. But all that changes. I washed, peeled, sliced, diced, boiled, stirred, stuffed and scalded those lousy cucumbers until I thought I'd faint.

Finally, they were finished. We had yielded 12 quarts of old-fashioned bread and butter pickles. I got out a scratch pad and began to figure time and materials and they averaged out at $3.57 a quart. (Not counting the vet's bill when the dog ate the rinds, and the night we ate out when my husband was overdosed by vinegar.)

As we surveyed our efforts, my youngest said, "There's nothing to do now."

I turned to him. "Good. Why don't you whine and fall around the house like other kids?" (Copyright, 1974)

'Tommy Tooth' treated with new techniques

Dental disease is exceeded only by the common cold as the most prevalent health problem among youngsters in the U.S.

A dental team in Minnesota has observed that the significant difference is that "we soon lick colds with no serious after effects; whereas gum diseases and cavities are likely to worsen every day."

Dental techniques have changed in recent years, they state, and dental visits are more likely to be painless. Even the dental chair is more comfortable.

The two dentists, described as the dental equivalent of the Marcus Welby television medical team — that is, an older, experienced dentist, and a younger, idealistic, eager one — strongly advise careful toothbrushing and "flossing."

"The use of a soft, multitufted toothbrush will remove all the plaque on a tooth if properly used," one of them suggests.

The dental team also recommends fluoride treatments for youngsters to make enamel less soluble and more decay resistant.

Effective toothbrushing and flossing should take five to 10 minutes, the dentists state.

"Most of us associate good teeth with good looks," they point out. Sound teeth should be associated with good health, too. "The ability to chew food properly is a first step in the digestive process."

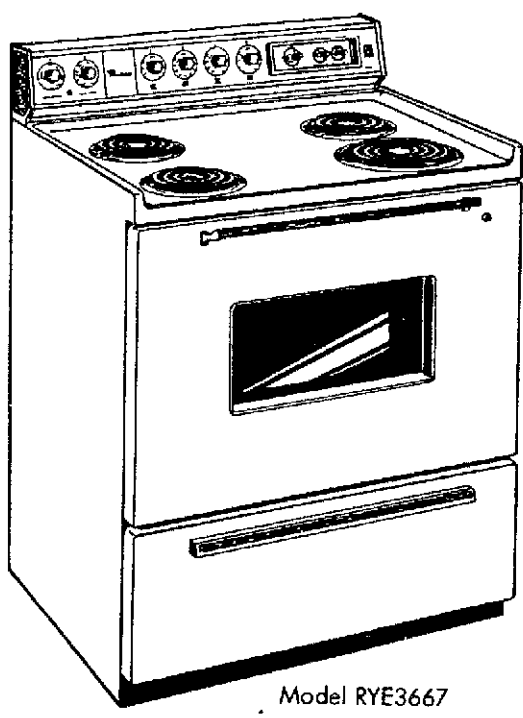

A further practical note was added when the dentists commented that preventing cavities saves the cost of fillings, which along with everything else, has risen in price.

Woehler's plan draws criticism

BY DON CASTONIA
Post-Crescent staff writer

Outagamie County Executive Alvin Woehler's proposal to set up combination citizen-supervisor councils to study finance, solid waste and mass transportation will probably run into strong opposition from the county board.

But his other three proposals, for a job classification study, county health department and reduction in size of the unified health services board, may get a more favorable reception.

A number of committee chairmen and County Board Chairman Eugene Higgins were flatly opposed to the council idea.

Higgins noted that "we have 42 county board members. One of the arguments is that the board is too big. It seems that adding citizen members only increases the size of the board with people who are not responsible to the electorate."

"I think the county board can handle the problems in the standing committees that already exist."

Woehler's plan called for eight-member councils equally split between citizen and supervisor representatives. The mass transportation and solid waste management councils would look into the entire Fox Cities service area and not just the Outagamie County portion of the Fox Cities.

His finance council would develop a three- to five-year capital improvements program utilizing revenue sharing and state health center setting up funds. He proposed that he co-chair that council himself, with the county treasurer.

Chairmen of the committees to which the proposals were referred promised a full airing of the requests, but mostly indicated personal opposition.

Supv. John Schreiter, chairman of the finance committee, said he would bring it to his committee, "but I personally can't go along with having these decisions made by people who are not responsible to the electorate." He added that he felt it was just another layer of government. "I have every confidence in the finance committee to make the decisions that have to be made," he said.

Supv. George Schroeder, chairman of the agriculture, education and human resources committee, also felt the issues should stay with the standing committees. "If we give all our authority away, we won't need the county board any more," he said.

He noted that there has been considerable discussion on reducing the size of the county board. "Now they want to create more committees. It is a complete contradiction. There are enough people on the board to handle the job."

Zoning Committee Chairman Joseph Kasperek commented that the group of citizens volunteering to help the county find a sanitary landfill site "was the same sort of approach." But, he said, "one problem is that most citizens don't understand the political process. It is hard to get their solutions into operation."

Only Supv. Harold Miller, chairman of the airport committee, agreed with citizen council concept, but then with some reservations. "I feel that citizen participation is good," Miller said, "if we would get some knowledgeable people in there with strength." But, he added, "I would want to be able to talk over his appointments with him (Woehler). I would want that courtesy."

Woehler had proposed that the mass transportation council be organized around the airport committee, but the proposal was referred to the highway committee for study. Miller said he was confident the highway committee would report out with a recommendation. Supv. George Kroes, highway committee chairman, could not be reached for comment.

Supv. Herman Ripp, chairman of the board of social services, said his immediate reaction to the council proposal "was not good." He said he felt there could be citizen input through elected representatives and by appearing at meetings.

Higgins supported the idea of a job classification study, and the proposal to do away with pay steps within each pay grade. "I think the pay grade system should be uniform throughout the county," he said.

Schreiter concurred. "I have favored an outside study for three or four years," he said. He said he also supported hiring a personnel director and felt that that person could then handle the county's labor negotiations.

The question of reducing the size of the unified health board was referred to Schroeder's human resources committee. He agreed that eventually the board should be reduced to nine. "But I question reducing it now. Until it's fully organized it needs all of the input it can get," he said.

He added he would favor waiting until after all the program coordinators have been hired before cutting its size. "There will be less work then."

Higgins noted that an attempt was made last November to reduce the size to nine and it was decided to give the 15 member board a year to get organized and functioning. That year expires in August. "I think we should wait until then," he said.

The county health department proposal was referred to the board of social services. Ripp agreed that something should be done in that area. He said he believed such a consolidation would save everyone money.

However, he questioned the effect of creation of a county department on the proposed new quarters for the county nurse's department.

Open house this week at Waupaca Foundry

WAUPACA — The Waupaca Foundry will have an open house Wednesday through Friday for the public, community and government officials and its employees' families.

Tours, conducted on an hourly schedule, will be offered to the public from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday at the firm's No. 2 and No. 3 plants, located off Tower Road and State 22 and 54 in the northeast industrial section.

Visitors will observe the city's largest employer and one of the area's largest industries in action. Literature, product displays and the actual production processes will tell the story of how this firm produces 800 tons of gray iron daily.

The Waupaca Foundry, a wholly owned and independently operated subsidiary of the Budd Co., since 1968 will have that firm's On the Move exhibit at the opening. The traveling unit, a 40 foot van and tractor, contains more than 150 selected products manufactured for automobile, industrial and international markets, including items produced locally.

The foundry was founded in 1955 by C. W. Schewinn, who retired in 1973 after a 52-year career in the foundry business. The Waupaca Foundry in 1955 boasted a payroll of 13 people and paid out $63,000 in salary and $437 in local taxes. Today the firm employs 500 and has an estimated payroll of $4 million and local taxes near the $100,000 mark.

Growth has been continuous and projected plans call for production of 1,000 tons of iron daily by 1975. The firm has installed and is operating an anti-pollution system which exceeds government requirements and is a model in the industry.

Wednesday will be employee's spouses day and Thursday will be open house for business, community and government officials. Transportation will be provided between the firm's four plants and there will be souvenirs and refreshments.

Cadettes plan for camporee

CLINTONVILLE — Cadette Troop 133 camped this weekend at Hartman Creek State Park near Waupaca in preparation for the troop's July 10-24 trip to the National Girl Scout Center West in Wyoming.

Twenty-eight girls and four adults camped out at Hartman Creek from Friday afternoon to Sunday morning.

John Rosnow, and son, Jeff, Clintonville, taught the girls the use of the compass. The Scouts participated in an outdoor worship service, planned and carried out by one of the patrols, before they returned home Sunday.

Approval was also given to retain DeLyle O. Omholt as city attorney; Dr. Cesar Garvida, health committee; Police Chief Gene Forsythe; Fire Chief Gerald Sabrowski; William Levezow, building inspector; Evan Rohde, weed committee; and Gordon Hutchison, dance inspector.

The Farmers State Bank of Manawa is the official depository; the Manawa Advocate the official publication and Timm and Co., auditor.

Board OKs testing plot in Amherst

AMHERST — Use of 10 acres of the 50-acre land site near the high school building as an experimental corn plot was approved by the school board Monday night.

Elliot Michael, agricultural instructor, explained that various seed varieties as well as herbicides will be tested in the experimental program. A total of 30 acres of the site is already being used for buildings, playgrounds and athletic fields, while remaining land will be left in its natural state.

In other board action, a request from the teachers' association to change the health insurance carrier from WPS to Blue Cross-Blue Shield was approved. It also agreed to deduct premiums for group disability when a mutually acceptable carrier is selected.

A proposal to replace the roof on the Agricultural Shop was offered by Clifford Golke of Waupaca Roofers at at cost of $2,800 was accepted. A commitment to CESA No. 7 for the purchase of Psychological Services was also okayed.

Manawa Jaycees will have a bicycle inspection and rodeo starting at 1 p.m. May 25 in the parking lot of St. Paul's Lutheran Church. Refreshments will be served on the grounds and prizes will be awarded during the event.

Arnold Bruns representing the Manawa Rural Fire Department, reported that a donation of $300 had been received. The money will be used for the purchase of a new boat and water rescue equipment.

Levezow was instructed to publish a notice of the need to obtain a building permit before commencing with any building as stated in the city ordinances. Violations by building contractors and individuals have been noted in both construction and demolition.

Hilbert won't subsidize cost of extensions

By HAZEL THIEL
Post-Crescent correspondent

HILBERT — Property owners in the village in the future will pay the entire cost of sewer and water extensions, the village board has agreed.

The board also has agreed with its engineers, Arthur and Associates, Fond du Lac, to have zoning in the village. Model ordinances will be submitted by the engineers to be acted on by village officials.

The matter of having property owners pay the full amount for utility extensions, previously subsidized by the village, was discussed recently after the board rejected bids for sewer and water extensions to a proposed apartment house for Clarence Hemauer on N. Fourth Street. The bids were rejected because the cost was too much and the village would have been forced to borrow $10,000 to pay for it.

It was mentioned, however, that a special concession may be made in Hemauer's case.

Trustee Arne Albers moved that in the future, all property owners pay the full cost of the extensions and that curb and gutter also should be considered. "We can't keep going on like this and we can't sit and argue about it at every meeting. People are laughing at us," Albers said.

The trustee has maintained constantly that the village should take this step and form a policy similar to other area communities.

James Arthur, engineer, said he believed the board had taken a step in the right direction. He said he had intended to speak about the matter because, as village engineers, their position also is to advise. "You can't stop progress, but the village board is not in the business of financing developers who are going to make the buck," Arthur said.

He added that there were two ways of doing this. In new areas, a subdivision ordinance requires that on platting, sewer and water and whatever else the village decides, should be put in by the developer.

In older or platted areas, a special assessment ordinance is used requiring rates per front foot and rates are revised periodically. The village could set up financing requiring that the assessments be paid in five years with interest.

Arthur said he was recommending zoning. He pointed out that his firm also acted on planners and this matter came under the realm of planning.

During the meeting, the proposed Hanold apartment building again was discussed. It was indicated that the Hanolds might seek a different location than Greve's Court, where difficulty was being experienced extending sewer and water.

Arthur said the village should have a multiple housing area set aside, as well as an area for industrial, commercial, and residential building.

Bids for the flow metering equipment for the sewage plant agreed upon at the last meeting will be opened at 7 p.m. June 11.

In order to get a discharge permit from the state Department of Natural Resources (DNR), the engineers were authorized to make an infiltration inflow analysis report. The village also will have to have its chlorination facilities in working order and laboratory equipment in order to get the permit.

Herman Greve discussed a letter he had sent to the village stating he had been promised sewer and water extensions to Greve Court if the area were platted.

Greve reviewed the history of his platting and said material was delivered to the site to lay the extensions and then removed.

President Orville Manz said there was no record of anything being promised Greve and that he had only signed approval of the plat in 1968. Manz said sewer and water extensions were made to the area as far as the village could go at that time. The village has accepted the streets in the area.

Greve, obviously dissatisfied, said he believed sewer and water should be extended to the area, "but I can't talk you into it." In the final remark, Manz pointed out the cost.

Fire Chief Ernest Pitzen reported that the volunteer firemen were planning to dedicate the new floor in the shelter building with a dance on May 31. There will be a ribbon cutting ceremony and refreshments will be served by the firemen's auxiliary.

Pitzen also said there are many houses in the village without numbers and the homeowners should pick them up at the village hall.

Some bicycles in the village still do not have licenses, despite the recent issuance of 227 licenses. These may be picked up at the village hall any day at 1 p.m.

Pitzen also requested that lawn clippings blown into the road be picked up by the property owner.

In other business, the board agreed to accept new services being offered by Arthur and Associates regarding meetings on new regulations on waste water treatment plants and other information pertaining to regulations for municipalities.

Waupaca board slates night meeting on talks with police association

WAUPACA — The county board will have one of its infrequent evening sessions when it convenes at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday to consider approval of its first contract with the Waupaca County Law Enforcement Officers Association.

When the county board held its two day meeting in April and the salary and negotiating procedures endorsed by the personnel committee were presented, the total contract met with some opposition. When it was initially presented to the supervisors on April 16, they voted to table the matter until they had an opportunity to individually look it over closely.

The contract was reintroduced the following day and the board voted to accept the salary agreement as written and defer any action on the negotiating procedures of the contract.

Salary increases for sheriff department investigators and jailers and dispatchers and county traffic officers, substantially increased across the pay scale and spread over a 15 month period became effective on April 1, with increases due in July 1 and Jan. 1 and July 1 of 1975, were approved.

"Since our April meeting the personnel committee, the law enforcement committee and the executive committee met to discuss the bargaining portion of the contract with the association," Chairman Woodrow Smith said today. "After lengthy discussion, the three committees voted unanimously to recommend the adoption of this part of the contract."

Another item on the agenda, which is made up mostly of routine business matters, will be the consideration of forming a county commission on aging. It is necessary that a commission of at least nine, but no more than thirteen, be formed if this county is to meet the needs of its senior citizens economically and socially.

West opened the queen of diamonds, and East won with the ace. East returned the five of diamonds, and South took the king. When West played the eight of diamonds, South felt pretty sure that the missing four of diamonds was in the East hand.
The diamonds don't seem to matter much, but they do. South's slam depends on the play of the clubs. The normal play is to lead a club to dummy's ace and then return a club to finesse the jack.

SUCCESSFUL FEINT
South improved his chances by means of a feint. After winning the second trick with the king of diamonds, South led out his three top spades.

West discarded a diamond on the queen of spades, and South knew what he needed to know: West held the queen of trumps.

It would seem that South was trying to discard dummy's 1st diamond on the queen of spades. If West had only worthless trumps he would ruff the queen of spades to prevent the diamond discard.

Why would West fail to ruff the queen of spades? Clearly because his trumps were valuable rather than worthless.

Having discovered the trump situation, South led the jack of clubs from his hand and let it ride for a finesse. The rest was easy. If West had covered with the queen of clubs, dummy's ace would win and then East's ten would be picked up.

Control beetles, moths

How can moths and beetles be controlled in carpeting? In the past, insect control for carpeting was a real problem for homemakers. Today, however, all quality wool and woolblend carpeting is mothproofed during manufacture and insect problems have been practically eliminated.

Wool carpet more than three years old, or which is not labeled mothproof, can be treated occasionally with an insecticide for moths. Regular, good housekeeping is also a preventive measure; daily vacuuming of all rugs, and the periodic airing of smaller ones will discourage pests. Rugs and carpets made of synthetic fibers are naturally resistant to moths and carpet beetles.

invariably has a gee-how-I'd-like-to-do-the-whole-thing-over-effect on the female of the species. Happily, it's possible to appease the redecorating itch without putting a crimp in the budget.
Take closets. This year, instead of the annual boring routine of cleaning and mothproofing, why not redo your closet entirely to make it more attractive and efficient. For some reason known only to architects and landlords, most closets have a single pole reaching from wall to wall that leaves a lot of wasted space above and below. You don't have to be a mathematical genius to figure out that raising the pole and installing another one a couple of feet below it will double your hanging space. You can use the upper rod for skirts and blouses or, if there's enough height, transfer out-of-season clothing to it.

"The average closet is also sadly lacking in shelf space," says Josephine Tuths, a decorating consultant. "An inexpensive and functional way to acquire shelf space is to buy metal industrial shelving and cover it with one of the bright spring-like contact papers. The shelves will take care of all the unchangeables — scarves, sweaters, pantyhose, gloves, jewelry, hats, belts and shoes that you can stash in see-through plastic boxes. To complete the look of your new custom closet, add hangers that match the dominant color of your shelf paper."

Who says you can't have a garden without a terrace or a backyard? An indoor garden is one of the newest, freshest ways to decorate. If your bathroom has a window, buy some brackets and put a few shelves across it. A dime store is a good place to start a plant collection and you'll find that most varieties thrive in a bathroom's high humidity. To compensate for no view in the living room, put a few hanging pots at the window. Hanging fixtures are of two types: wall and ceiling. Choose plants that drip and trail luxuriantly — ivy and spider plants are particularly pretty in hanging baskets.

Teacher negotiations resume this afternoon

BY BERNIE PETERSON
Post-Crescent staff writer

Negotiations in the 10-week-old Hortonville teachers' strike were set to resume this afternoon.

Outagamie County Judge R. Thomas Cane announced the resumption of talks this morning after calling off a scheduled hearing on two strike-related orders to show cause.

"Both sides have indicated they are willing to sit down and negotiate," Cane said. He added that Howard Bellman of the Wisconsin Employment Relations Commission had been contacted in Madison and was to arrive in Appleton for the new talks, set to begin at 1 p.m. in Cane's courthouse chambers.

Negotiations were last held April 24. Cane said no new date has been set for the show cause hearing.

The hearing was to cover a request by the school board to strengthen Cane's earlier order regarding strike activities and to consider a request by the striking Hortonville Education Association teachers to get better access to the school building for removal of their belongings.

In another development, a group of parents of Hortonville students announced it had collected 1,810 signatures on petitions during the weekend.

The petitions, directed to the state Supreme Court, ask the high court to take jurisdiction and order Cane to alter his May 6 order requiring the school board to hire back fired teachers to fill current vacancies. To date, five of these teachers have been rehired.

In addition, the petitions ask the Supreme Court to compel Cane to require the return to the school district the return of the report card records of the students. Also, the parents want the HEA teachers to return keys, teaching materials and other property owned by the district.

In the petitions, the parents claim they will be "irreparably injured" unless the Supreme Court takes jurisdiction and corresponding action to find the HEA in violation of the no-strike and theft provisions of the state statutes.

The petitioners said they "wholeheartedly endorse the actions of the school board and support the notion that the right to make a decision as to the qualifications and hiring of candidates for vacant teaching positions should be exclusively the prerogative of the school board."

A spokesman for the parents said the petitions were circulated during the weekend by 45 persons, and that parents of 1,457, or about 76 per cent, of the school district's students, signed.

He said the move was prompted by an announcement by the HEA that it would distribute grade records of students to the individual parents Wednesday evening at a Town of Grand Chute hall.

The spokesman stressed that the petitioners are not intervenors in any pending court action, but that they have retained the services of a local attorney and collected "sufficient funds" to carry out their activities.

Meanwhile, an estimated 400 picketing teachers and their supporters awarded the state's superintendent of public instruction a degree for "inhumanity" Sunday afternoon at Waukesha's Carroll College.

Mrs. Barbara Thompson was there to receive an honorary doctor of humane letters degree from the school during its commencement exercises. No violence broke out during the picketing.

The large "diploma" picket sign was tied to a utility pole on campus and claimed that Thompson has suppressed teachers' rights and that she favors breaking teacher strikes.

Signs identified the pickets as teachers from schools throughout the southern part of the state.

Students face self-scheduling as Xavier attempts modular system

Students at Appleton Xavier High School recently faced the problems of scheduling classes for themselves.

"There were some disgruntled students," noted Don Nass, head counselor at the school, as students faced the problems that arise as each student tries to get the elective courses he wants. "But, I think it gave the students and the teachers idea of what programming is all about."

The self-scheduling is part of a change which next fall will see Xavier attempting a "modified form of modular scheduling" in which the school will operate on a six-day cycle but only involving five calendar days a week.

Nass explained that the timetable will have six hour days but on a seven-hour basis with the moveable seventh period knocked out at a different time each day. Thus, said Nass, the seventh period on one Monday may come at 8 a.m. and on Tuesday fall at 2 p.m.

The new scheduling will allow the students to enroll in one more subject than traditionally allowed, and with this compromise form, the scheduling will not be as "chaotic" as the modular systems available, said Nass.

By having students schedule their own classes, the school is allowing them more freedom and more responsibility. There is a close check on freshmen at Xavier, Nass noted, as well as sophomores. By the junior year, the supervision starts to let up as more elective subjects are available and the student is given an option in types of study halls. Then, by the senior year, the student has the open campus.

By allowing the self-scheduling, the students are exposed to the problems they may encounter in attending technical school or universities in which the student has to take the responsibility for his own education. "They have to get used to standing in line and meeting deadlines. This helps them to understand what might be in store for them," said Nass.

The project began with a workshop for teachers and the compilation of all the classes students said they wanted. A master work schedule was made and last week the students began to sign up for next year's classes. The students took turns, starting with names in reverse alphabetical order, with seniors allowed first choice.

"The first day was easy," Nass recalled, "because none of the courses were closed. But as the quotas were reached on the numbers of students allowed on each course, students met the problems associated with trying to reasonably provide what everyone wants."

On the senior level, there is usually only one course offered in certain subjects, such as advanced math or languages. Students who wanted to take several of these found conflicting times

50-acre site preserved as wildlife area

WAUKAU — A 50-acre wildlife area one-quarter mile north of here along Winnebago County Trunk K was dedicated Saturday and donated to Winnebago County by Natural Areas Preservation Inc., a citizen group which purchases and preserves wild lands.

The area, which cost $18,000, will be preserved by Winnebago County as a wild area.

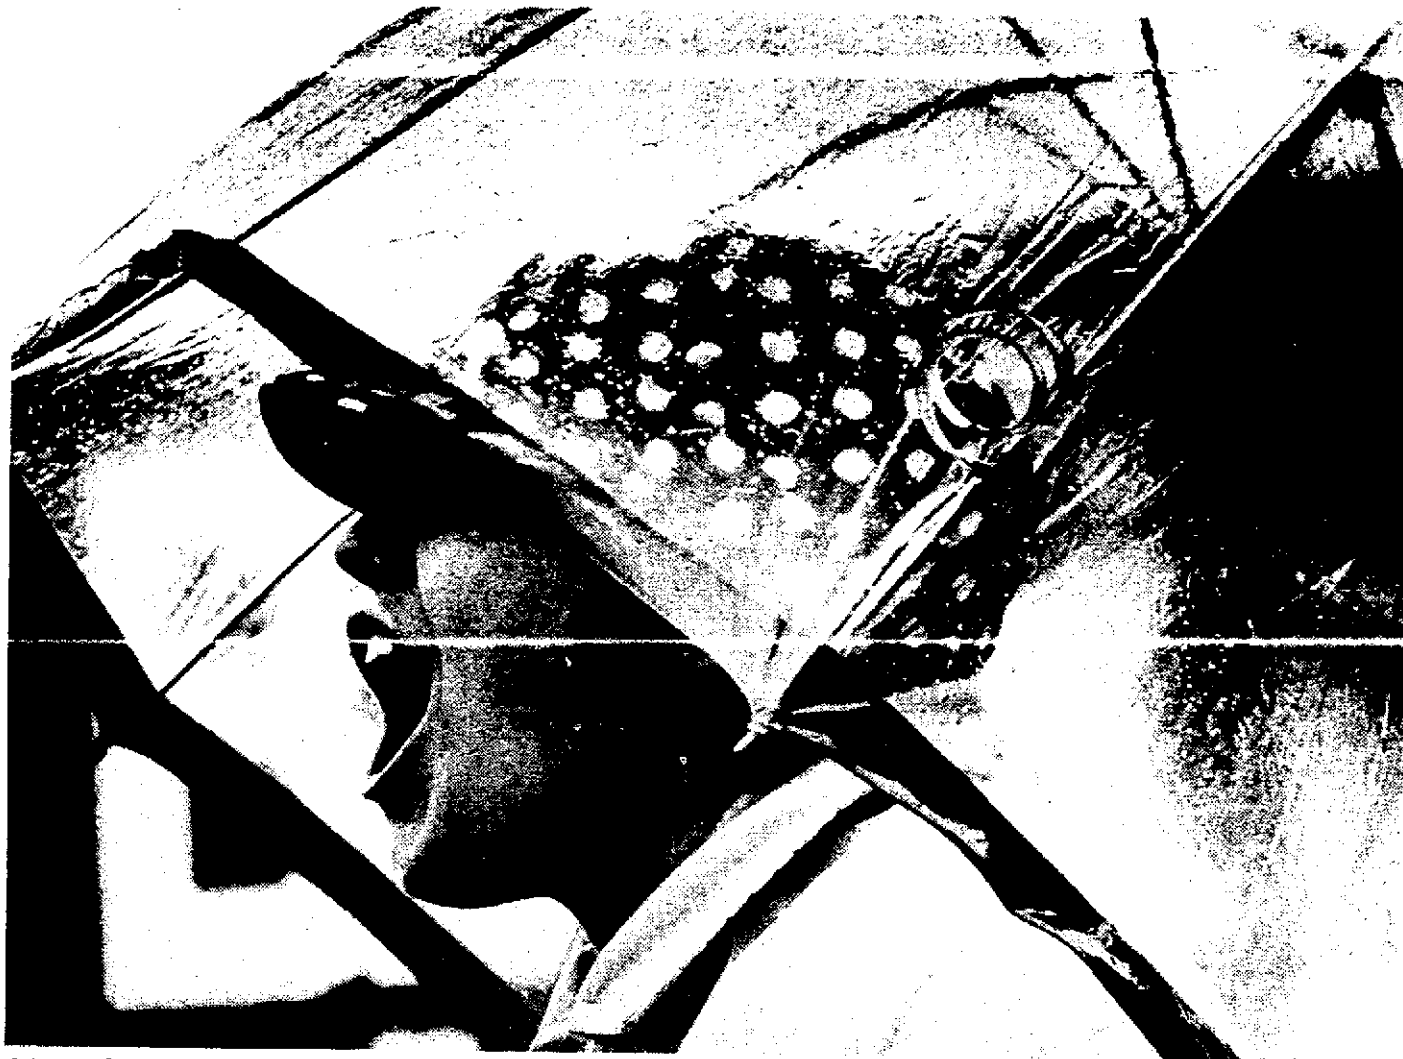

Neil Harriman, University of Wisconsin-Oshkosh, biology professor, said the area was most valuable for its diversity. The area includes not only a creek and marsh but upland hardwood vegetation.

Mallards nest in the area, said Harriman. He said raccoon, mink, opossum and skunk inhabit the area.

The area includes the Waukau Creek, its floodplain and adjacent marshes and upland woods. It was selected for preservation after examination by Max Carpenter, route 1, Omro; Gordon Bubolz, 78 River Drive, Appleton, president of Natural Areas Preservation Inc.; and Charles Hervey, a landscape architect.

Bubolz said Saturday that the preservation is important as part of an effort to maintain the balance of nature. "We must preserve and protect not only the forests and fields, which give us the fiber and the food; it is equally imperative that we preserve the wetlands, marshes, and swamps, God's sponges of nature. They are life-giving sources of our surface and ground waters; they filter and purify it; and thus these components of the environment are an important part of nature's renewing and revitalizing processes."

Bubolz said that saving areas such as the Waukau Creek wildlife area are important to human life and that without such natural tracts the quality of life would suffer.

Woehler's 'council' plan criticized by supervisors

BY DON CASTONIA
Post-Crescent staff writer

Outagamie County Executive Alvin Woehler's proposal to set up combination citizen-supervisor councils to study finance, solid waste and mass transportation will probably run into strong opposition from the county board.

But his other three proposals, for a job classification study, county health department and reduction in size of the unified health services board, may get a more favorable reception.

A number of committee chairmen and County Board Chairman Eugene Higgins were flatly opposed to the council idea.

Higgins noted that "we have 42 county board members. One of the arguments is that the board is too big. It seems that adding citizen members only increases the size of the board with people who are not responsible to the electorate."

"I think the county board can handle the problems in the standing committees that already exist."

Woehler's plan called for eight-member councils equally split between citizen and supervisor representatives. The mass transportation and solid waste management councils would look into the entire Fox Cities service area and not just the Outagamie County portion of the Fox Cities.

His finance council would develop a three- to five-year capital improvements program utilizing revenue sharing and state health center settling up funds. He proposed that he co-chair that council himself, with the county treasurer.

Chairmen of the committees to which the proposals were referred promised a full airing of the requests, but mostly indicated personal opposition.

Supv. John Schreiter, chairman of the finance committee, said he would bring it to his committee, "but I personally can't go along with having these decisions made by people who are not responsible to the electorate." He added that he felt it was just another layer of government. "I have every confidence in the finance committee to make the decisions that have to be made," he said.

Supv. George Schroeder, chairman of the agriculture, education and human resources committee, also felt the issues should stay with the standing committees. "If we give all our authority away, we won't need the county board any more," he said.

He noted that there has been considerable discussion on reducing the size of the county board. "Now they want to create more committees. It is a complete contradiction. There are enough people on the board to handle the job."

Zoning Committee Chairman Joseph Kasperk commented that the group of citizens volunteering to help the county find a sanitary landfill site "was the same sort of approach." But, he said, "one problem is that most citizens don't understand the political process. It is hard to get their solutions into operation."

Only Supv. Harold Miller, chairman of the airport committee, agreed with citizen council concept, but then with some reservations. "I feel that citizen participation is good," Miller said, "if we would get some knowledgeable people in there with strength." But, he added, "I would want to be able to talk over his appointments with him (Woehler). I would want that courtesy."

Woehler had proposed that the mass transportation council be organized around the airport committee, but the proposal was referred to the highway committee for study. Miller said he was confident the highway committee would report out with a recommendation. Supv. George Kroes, highway committee chairman, could not be reached for comment.

Froehlich says courts must rule on subpoena

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wisconsin's freshman congressman, a Republican member of the House Judiciary Committee, says courts ought to decide whether President Nixon releases more data to the impeachment panel.

Rep. Harold V. Froehlich of Appleton, Wis. in a letter Sunday to the committee chairman, Rep. Peter Rodino, said a jurisdictional showdown with the White House should be avoided.

While Nixon's excuses for withholding further tapes may be "utterly lacking in legal merit," the committee too should avoid making assumptions about its legal limits, he said.

"The committee does not have unlimited power to secure evidence from the President," Froehlich said.

"The President should not be the final authority over what he releases to us," Froehlich said, and courts should "settle the fundamental disputes" between Nixon's lawyers and Rodino's committee.

He suggested Nixon may wish to offer several reasons for not divulging evidence, citing the Fifth Amendment, attorney-client privileges, national security and what Nixon calls executive privilege.

Also representing Wisconsin on the Judiciary Committee is Democratic Rep. Robert W. Kastenmeier, who has voted to reject Nixon's argument that the committee's subpoena of data has been satisfied by an edited White House transcript of tape recordings.

Froehlich was one of three Republicans who were absent April 11, while the committee was voting 33-3 to subpoena 41 tapes.

He has denied he is inviting Nixon to campaign for his 8th Congressional District re-election bid this fall, but said he has a "tentative commitment" for help from Vice President Gerald R. Ford.

Froehlich had said in October he feared the Rodino committee's study of grounds for impeachment would turn into a partisan affair between the panel's Democratic and Republican members.

He complained in April that the impeachment business is being dragged out too long, saying: "I don't think the committee has been moving fast enough, or that the White House has been cooperating fully enough."

In his statement Sunday, Froehlich said "the time has come to resort to the courts."

"In conducting this investigation," he said, "the committee is entitled to seek all relevant evidence of specified presidential misconduct."

"But it does not necessarily follow that the committee is entitled to receive from the President all the evidence it seeks," he continued.

Study urged on Appleton mail complaint

Two Wisconsin lawmakers say they are working to resolve Appleton's complaint about postal regulations that prohibit home mail delivery where houses are more than 50 feet apart or 20 feet from the sidewalk.

U. S. Rep. Harold Froehlich, R-Appleton, said the city's gripe is one of a "number of complaints about postal delivery service which are pretty difficult to resolve under the present postal service regulations."

He asked the postal service, however, to investigate the issues raised by the city council and also inform him on what is being done to improve postal service in general.

Froehlich wrote the postal service that congressmen are "receiving increased complaints concerning the high cost of mail delivery and the deteriorating service."

U. S. Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., also wrote City Clerk Elden Broehm that he has written the postal service asking it to "reconsider" its decision setting the home delivery regulations.

The council voted unanimously to ask for the help of the state's federal lawmakers in getting the regulations changed after Public Works Director Robert Miller said present regulations were in effect prohibiting home delivery

County lawmen storm Sunnyview, roust rebels

WINNEBAGO — It was like Los Angeles without the fire or casualties.

County and Oshkosh police, participating in a training exercise Saturday and armed with an arsenal that included tear gas grenades and guns, semi-automatic rifles and revolvers, peppered a deserted wing of Sunnyview Sanatorium with a volley of gunfire that left two rooms in a shambles.

Paper targets in each of the two rooms, positioned to simulate a men hiding in the building and firing back, didn't stand a chance. It was evident from holes in the targets, smashed interior walls, and shattered brickwork and windows that one will want to stay on the good side of the local law.

The police gunfire, tear gassing, and teamwork was, to say the least, formidable.

Lt. Edward Misch of the sheriff's department, who coordinated the tactical exercise which involved about 30 lawmen and riot squads from both departments, labeled it a success and a learning experience.

It was the first time, for instance that Oshkosh City Police had used some of their tear gas canisters and frequently, they were found to be duds. At least two of the canisters were marked for use before October, 1961.

Authorities also got a chance to use a device which emits "Pepper Fog," an irritating tear gas, and test their gas masks under actual conditions.

Two "pepper foggers" were started up but one, apparently due to a clogged gas line, conked out. The other one worked.

The device spews a locally heavy cloud of gas that surely would bring the most ardent revolutionary to his knees. Lawmen wearing gas masks who were caught in the acrid mist emerged unscathed. But a couple of unprotected lawmen and this reporter, who unwittingly were in range when the wind shifted, learned that the gas is extremely unkind to eyes, nose and throat.

The session was conducted in two phases. The first and less dramatic of the two involved police detection work inside the building, a former tuberculosis sanatorium. In teams, officers searched various sections as lawmen would if a dangerous individual was inside.

During the second phase, police opened up with their artillery. It began with a "thunk" as officers fired overhead illumination bombs. Then, with city police taking defensive positions behind a tiny knoll and county police behind and stop a small out-building, police opened fire at the two rooms from point blank range.

Depending on one's background, the ensuing barrage could be likened to a firefight in Vietnam, an endless display of aerial bombs on July 4 or a raucous series of backfires from an automobile. Loud? Man, was it loud.

From a shooting standpoint, police showed they know how to handle modern weaponry.

By contrast, however, the exercise indicated that those police television shows which make tear gas handling look effortless are probably somewhat of an oversimplification.

In succession, two officers ran up to the side of the building with their live hand-held tear gas canisters and lobbed them toward the shattered windows, only to have them "clunk" into the side of the building and emit their fumes harmlessly into the open air.

Police were very accurately firing tear gas from their guns, however, and lawmen entering the two rooms afterwards had to don gas masks.

Police & fire beat

KAUKAUNA — Two drivers sustained head bumps and bruises in a two-car accident at State 55 and Maloney Road just before 12:30 a.m. Sunday.

Injured were Dennis Vanden Heuvel, 17, route 4, Appleton, and James G. Rosin, 19, route 1, Kaukauna.

Police said Vanden Heuvel pulled out from a stop sign in the eastbound lane of Maloney and was struck by Rosin, moving north on 55.

Herman C. Griesbach, 16, 6207 N. Lynndale Drive, was taken by ambulance to St. Elizabeth Hospital early Sunday with face and arm cuts he suffered when his car struck and seriously damaged the Florence Connell home at 1010 N. Locust St.

Appleton police said the Griesbach car was turning onto Locust Street from Commercial Street at a high rate of speed when it jumped the curb and struck shrubs at 734 W. Commercial St., then continued on and struck the Connell home.

Two persons were listed in fair condition at St. Elizabeth Hospital after they were injured in a two-vehicle accident on U.S. 10 near Winchester Road, Town of Dale, about 3 p.m. Sunday.

John C. Much, 47, route 1, Fremont, complained of a head cut and shoulder pains, while William R. Weber, 27, 407 Ahnapp St., Menasha, sustained back abrasions and a severe forehead cut.

Police said Weber's car was east-bound on 10 when he attempted to pass another vehicle and forced a westbound car off the road. Weber went out of control into the north ditch, crossing back over into the south ditch, where he broke off a power pole and struck Much's tractor, stopped in his driveway.

Witnesses said Weber's car had been traveling at a high rate of speed.

KAUKAUNA — Two route 1, Kaukauna persons were injured in a two-car accident on U.S. 41 near County Trunk OO about 4:30 a.m. Sunday.

Ethel Vande Hey, 37, sustained a bumped forehead, while Gordon Vande Hey, 54, received a cut knee.

They were riding in a car driven by Eugene Vande Hey, 42, which police said was northbound on 41 when it struck the rear of the second car, driven by Joseph H. Vanden Bogart, 38, also route 1, Kaukauna.

ment. Supv. Herman Ripp, chairman of the board of social services, said his immediate reaction to the council proposal "was not good." He said he felt there could be citizen input through elected representatives and by appearing at meetings.

Higgins supported the idea of a job classification study, and the proposal to do away with pay steps within each pay grade. "I think the pay grade system should be uniform throughout the county," he said.

Schreiter concurred. "I have favored an outside study for three or four years," he said. He said he also supported hiring a personnel director and felt that that person could then handle the county's labor negotiations.

The question of reducing the size of the unified health board was referred to Schroeder's human resources committee. He agreed that eventually the board should be reduced to nine. "But I question reducing it now. Until it's fully organized it needs all of the input it can get," he said.

He added he would favor waiting until after all the program coordinators have been hired before cutting its size. "There will be less work then."

Higgins noted that an attempt was made last November to reduce the size to nine and it was decided to give the 15 member board a year to get organized and functioning. That year expires in August. "I think we should wait until then," he said.

The county health department proposal was referred to the board of social services. Ripp agreed that something should be done in that area. He said he believed such a consolidation would save everyone money.

However, he questioned the effect of creation of a county department on the proposed new quarters for the county nurse's department.

in newly-developed areas because city ordinance does not allow construction at or under the present limits.

Older areas of the city are served with home delivery, he said, because they were developed when city zoning codes allowed residential construction on lots of 50 feet or less and closer than 20 feet to the sidewalk.

Several aldermen said this discriminated against newer sections of the city.

Miller said he wanted the change in order to cut back on department costs required to replace roadside mail boxes that are knocked down by city snow plows. He said that five or six are knocked down every plowing season.

Local Postmaster Richard Michaels said that the postal regulations were aimed at cutting down on the high delivery costs that would result if mail had to be delivered to homes in rural and other areas where they are widely scattered and often far from the road.

It would increase postal service costs substantially, he said, to purchase the necessary equipment and manpower to make home delivery in such areas.

Aldermen said they intended to follow up the resolution asking for lawmaker support if they did not get any action. Public Safety Committee Chairman Ald. William Errington (15th) said his committee would push the matter.

Ground was broken last week for the new headquarters of the Appleton Area Chamber of Commerce at the corner of Walnut and Eighth streets. The $190,000, one-story building is expected to be completed in September. the new structure as Ruth Strobel, a member of the building committee, and Mayor James Sutherland and others in the background watch. The chamber will vacate its present headquarters on Washington Street, owned by First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Wisconsin, to allow the association to expand. (Post-Crescent photo)

Boy assaulted in auto yard

Winnebago County Sheriff's authorities are searching for three suspects who assaulted a 14-year-old Town of Menasha boy with a knife while he attempted to stop them from breaking into an auto body yard late Sunday afternoon.

According to sheriff's reports, the boy saw three men in a dark green car drive up to Mid-City Auto Body, 1104 Valley Rd., Menasha, about 4 p.m. The men, who were carrying tool boxes, climbed a fence and began removing parts from junked cars.

The boy attempted to stop one of them, but a second suspect grabbed the him, holding a knife to his stomach while the third man kicked him several times.

After the men released him, the boy again tried to stop them, but they began chasing him and he fled. The suspects then escaped in their car.

Two of the men were described as being five feet, five inches, and five feet 11 inches, in height. Both had long blond hair. The man who wielded the knife was described as weighing 200 pounds and having long black hair.

"I guess they had other things to do," The picketing represented another chapter of protest by members of the Wisconsin Education Association Council against Mrs. Thompson and her opposition to strikes by teachers.

Teachers who were invited to a two-hour demonstration assembled at a baseball lot under sunny skies, marched to the college and picketed for about 90 minutes.

and were forced to make the decisions themselves. Previously, the school had to individually try and match student requests with a master list. The process was long and complicated according to Nass, and took most of the summer.

Though the preparation for this scheduling project took about as much time as the old way, a lot less time will be used in actually resolving conflicts as the students have made the decisions themselves.

There are still several problems to resolve, some parents have complained and there are many problems that need to be solved.

There are some unsolvable problems in which legitimate conflicts can't be worked out, but students and teachers have been exposed to the problems and hopefully will be more understanding.

Nass admits the true test of the scheduling change will come in the fall.

Confident Roth set to tell plan to seek another term

State Rep. Tobias Roth, R-Appleton, will seek re-election this year.

He is expected to make his formal announcement of candidacy for a second consecutive term early next week.

Meanwhile, mouths are still closed on whom the Democrats will field for a race against Roth, although Ald. William Errington (15th) has been mentioned as a strong possibility.

Errington himself said he is "not prepared to make any statement" concerning a race for the Assembly. But he did not say that he would definitely not run.

Informed sources said an announcement could be made by Errington or some other Democratic hopeful within the next week or two.

Roth is reportedly confident that he can win re-election this year, despite the public despondency of many Republicans who see Watergate on the national level and the drought of campaign finances in Wisconsin as a bad omen for November.

Papers for state office can be circulated June 1. Deadline for filing those nomination petitions is June 25.

Roth won impressively in a four-way primary battle in 1972 before going on to defeat his Democratic opponent in the November general election.

Roth stepped into the shoes previously filled by former state Rep. Harold Froehlich, R-Appleton, who had held the Appleton Assembly seat for ten years before running for Congress in 1972 and winning narrowly.

Roth, 35, took 52 per cent of the vote total in the four-way primary and went on to capture 68 per cent of the votes in defeating Democratic candidate Thomas Lonsway.

Lonsway has said he will not run for the Assembly this year. He is known to be considering a race for another office, however.

Roth reportedly feels the favorable reaction he has received from constituents during his first term, combined with the strong Republican vote that normally turns out in the city, will give him the opportunity to campaign in other areas of the state during the upcoming campaign for Republican candidates facing tougher races.

The Appleton businessman has served on the municipalities and revisions, repeal and uniform laws' committees during his first term. He has also been appointed to a special study committee on personal property tax exemptions.

Errington, 47, has served on the City Council five years. He has never run for higher office before, but is now said to be considering both the run for the Assembly and a race for mayor here in two years.

He has reportedly been approached by a group of potential supporters to run for mayor.

Errington's public office ambitions might have been strengthened after he was laid off along with a number of other employees by Appleton Wire, after many years of service there.

Brews back in lead after spitting pair

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Tom Murphy, one of the major surprises of the baseball season, gave the Milwaukee Brewers another big lift Sunday—right back into first place in the American League East.

Murphy, enjoying a bright new career as a short relief pitcher, earned his fourth save with 22-3 hitless innings in the nightcap as the Brewers salvaged a double-header split by beating the New York Yankees 3-1.

The Yankees won the opener 6-2 as Lou Piniella's three-run double capped a four run seventh inning. However, Jonn Briggs' two-run homer in the nightcap, along with the pitching of Murphy and Billy Champion, enabled the Brewers to take the division lead by one percentage point.

Champion, starting for the second time in four days in place of injured Jim Colborn, checked the Yankees on three hits until one out singles in the seventh by Rick Dempsey and Jim Mason and a walk brought in Murphy.

Murphy gave up a sacrifice fly to Roy

White, but fanned Piniella to end the inning and worked the eighth and ninth without incident.

Murphy, who had pitched a hitless eighth and ninth to preserve Kevin Kobel's victory Saturday, has allowed just 12 hits and five runs over 24 innings in 13 games this season.

Murphy, 27, won 16 games for the California Angels in 1976 but drifted to the minors before being rescued by the St. Louis Cardinals last season. He had only a 3-7 record for the Cards, who traded him to the Brewers for reserve infielder Bob Heise last Dec. 7.

"I really don't know for sure why I've been doing so well," Murphy said. "Maybe it's because that in short relief I don't have to pitch as long and the hitters don't see so much of me."

However, he credited an adjustment in his delivery suggested this spring by pitching coach Al Widmar.

"I used to make a big loop with my arm when I brought it back to pitch," Murphy said. "Now, when I take the ball from my glove to start the pitch, I bring my arm almost straight up. It's made my fast ball sink and my slider go down more consistently."

Murphy, who had pitched in short relief only occasionally in his seven year career, said he had hoped to win a starting job with the Brewers.

"I had no idea they would consider using me in short relief," he said. "It didn't really come about until about a week before the season. We had three starters who were going to work all the time until the middle of May."

"That meant I would pitch very seldom and usually in long relief," he said. "I didn't really want that, so I was all for short relief because it would give me more work. It sure has. My arm's tired."

"Hopefully, I'll get a day off now," he said. "We've got a super reliever in (Eduardo) Rodriguez. He'll be a real asset, too."

The Brewers took a 3-0 lead on Charlie Moore's RBI single in the fifth and Briggs' two-run homer, his ninth, an inning later. Until he singled in the eighth, Briggs' last four hits had been homers and his last eight hits had been for extra bases. He had not hit a single since May 7.

"I'd have to say this is my best start ever for home runs and RBIs, but I welcome those singles, too," he said. "That home run stroke can disappear just like that."

Graig Nettles started the Yanks' seventh inning rally in the first game with a single and took second when the ball skipped past Briggs in left field for an error. Chris Chambliss followed with an RBI single, breaking a 1-1 tie.

A double by Dempsey and a walk loaded the bases for Piniella, who cleared them with his double to left.

The outburst at the expense of Jim Slaton (4-5) enabled the Yanks' Pat Dobson (3-6) to post his first victory since May 1 and break a personal three game losing streak.

"Dobson pitched a great game," said Yankee designated hitter Ron Blomberg. "His low curve was a tremendous pitch. He had all the hitters overstriding."

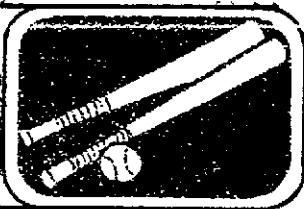

Blomberg collected four hits in seven times at bat in the twin bill, raising his batting average to .368. He was retired once on a line drive to Brewer first baseman George Scott and another time when the wind kept his long fly to right center in the park.

Detjens triumphs

BY GARY VERCAUTEREN

KAUKAUNA — Wisconsin International Raceway's four-race state championship series was launched in spectacular fashion here Sunday afternoon as Wausau's Larry Detjens wheeled his hemi-powered Dodge Challenger to victory before 4,253 persons. Detjens, who operates an auto body repair shop, passed two other racers on the final lap of the "Spring Opener 50".

Detjens had to work his way through the 23-car starting field and it wasn't until the 48th lap when he moved into the top three positions. He slipped into third spot on the 48th lap, passing Rich

Somers of Stevens Point.

He then made his bid for the top spot but couldn't find enough room to get past Jim Suter of Necedah and Mike Miller of New Prague, Minn., who had battled door-to-door for the lead for much of the distance.

As the white flag was waved, signaling one lap remaining, the three racers zoomed past the standing crowd, three abreast, with Detjens on the outside. Detjens entered the first turn with a slight lead and pulled away down the backstretch.

He won the event by one car length

Voetberg, Everson win titles

The 12th annual Bowl-O-Rama, sponsored by The Post-Crescent, is now history and Don Voetberg, Berlin, took the men's championship while Sandy Everson, Pine River, won first place in the women's class.

Voetberg went into first place on May 8 and withstood the late charge by a host of men keggers including Arden Borchardt, Neenah, who vaulted into second place on the final weekend of action. Voetberg had a 970 total for the first games, plus handicap to take the first place prize of $750 cash in addition to a diamond ring and engraved trophy.

Mrs. Everson was in first place in the women's division since April 26 when she jolted her 938 score, in including handicap. The best score on the final group of keggers in the classic was turned in by Sandi Dorn, Menasha, who had 878 to claim 11th place.

Bowl-O-Rama officials are now faced with the mammoth task of checking handicaps, averages and totals again to insure that the final standings are correct. All this must be completed before prizes can be awarded on the special "Prize Night" at the 41 Bowl.

As an off-shoot of the Bowl-O-Rama, the special "Sponsor's Night Party" will be held this evening at the 41 Bowl. Sponsors (those who brought in squads of 24 or more bowlers) will bowl three games in a special tournament for cash prizes. Flowing the competition, the sponsors will be treated to lunch and refreshments, and special merchandise awards will be presented.

Arden Borchardt's 951 explosion at the close of the tournament included 835 scratch to go with 116 pins handicap. After 198 in his first game, Arden went over the 200 mark in each of his next lines with scores of 204, 223 and 210.

Tough, young Flyers beat Bruins for Stanley Cup

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia has ceased to be a bad sports joke. The implausible Philadelphia Flyers are champions of the National Hockey League, owners of the biggest prize in hockey—the Stanley Cup.

The Flyers, only seven years old, became the first expansion team to win the storied Cup, and their amazing drive to the title surprised even their coach. They completed the job Sunday with a 1-0 victory over the mighty Boston Bruins.

"If someone asked me at the beginning of the season, if I thought this team would win the Stanley Cup, I'd have said they were crazy," said weary Flyers Coach Fred Shero. "I wasn't even thinking of first place. I didn't think this team would work this hard."

The tough, young Flyers closed out the Bruins on national television, 4-2, in the best-of-seven game series. Rick MacLeish tipped in the only goal of the game at 14:48 of the first period off a drive from just inside the blue line by Andre Dupont.

"I have been around a long time," said Shero, "long enough to know that this is a team that may never be duplicated. They gave you all you asked for, and if you wanted more they came up with it."

What Shero was trying to say is that the Flyers don't have the talent of the New York Rangers, who they eliminated 4-3 in the semifinals, and aren't in a class personnel-wise with Boston. They won because they were the hungriest team in the playoffs.

The Flyers are Philadelphia's first major champion since the Philadelphia 76ers won the National Basketball Association championship in 1966-67. Prior to that, the Philadelphia Eagles won the National Football League crown in 1960, and the Philadelphia Phillies won the National League baseball pennant in 1950. The city saluted the Flyers today in a parade through the downtown area.

Philadelphia reached the playoffs by winning the NHL's West Division championship over the runnerup Chicago Black Hawks, then sweeping the Atlanta Flames in the quarterfinals of the playoffs, beating the Rangers in the semifinals, and ousting Boston. They were the third team in league history to win as many as 50 games during the single regular season.

Shero said the key to the Boston series was the Flyers' ability to contain the Bruins' sensational Bobby Orr.

"I kept telling them to give the puck to him (Orr) and let him skate with it every chance you get," Shero explained. "I didn't mention his name but they knew who I meant. In fact I didn't mention either Orr or (Phil) Esposito."

The strategy was to tire Orr, make him work.

In recent years, baseball has been just a spring sport for fans in Texas and Cleveland. Late May is normally the time when the Rangers and Indians settle into their respective American League cellars and the fans' fancy turns to football.

This year may be different.

If the Rangers and Indians continue their turnaround, in good play, the baseball seasons in Texas and Cleveland could stretch into at least ... the summer.

"We're not the patsies we used to be," said Texas Manager Billy Martin after the Rangers pounded the Kansas City Royals 8-3 Sunday.

"The crowd was fantastic," said Cleveland Manager Ken Aspromonte, referring to 49,419 fans who saw the Indians beat the Detroit Tigers 2-1 and 9-4.

Elsewhere in the American League, the California Angels beat the Minnesota Twins in the opener 4-2, then lost 4-2 in the second game; the Boston Red Sox won a pair from the Baltimore Orioles 11-2 and 6-4; the New York Yankees tripped the Milwaukee Brewers 6-2 before dropping the nightcap 3-1, and the Oakland A's downed the Chicago White Sox 8-3.

The Rangers find themselves in third place with a 19-19 record, only one game in back of front-running Chicago.

Jackie Brown, 1-1, pitched five strong innings in relief of David Clyde, allowing one run on four hits. Steve Foucault kept the Royals hitless for the last 1 1-3 innings.

The Rangers were the only team to post a worse American League record than the Indians last year. Cleveland finished with a 71-91 record, 26 games behind first-place Baltimore.

In the opener, Gaylord Perry picked up his sixth straight win. The Indians staked Bob Johnson to a little more offensive help in the second game, building an 8-2 lead after five innings. Angels 4-2, Twins 2-4.

Jim Holt broke out of seasonlong slump with four hits in the second game, helping Minnesota gain a doubleheader split. In the opener, Bobby Valentine's run-scoring single triggered a four-run rally to give California and Nolan Ryan the victory.

Red Sox 11-6, Orioles 2-4

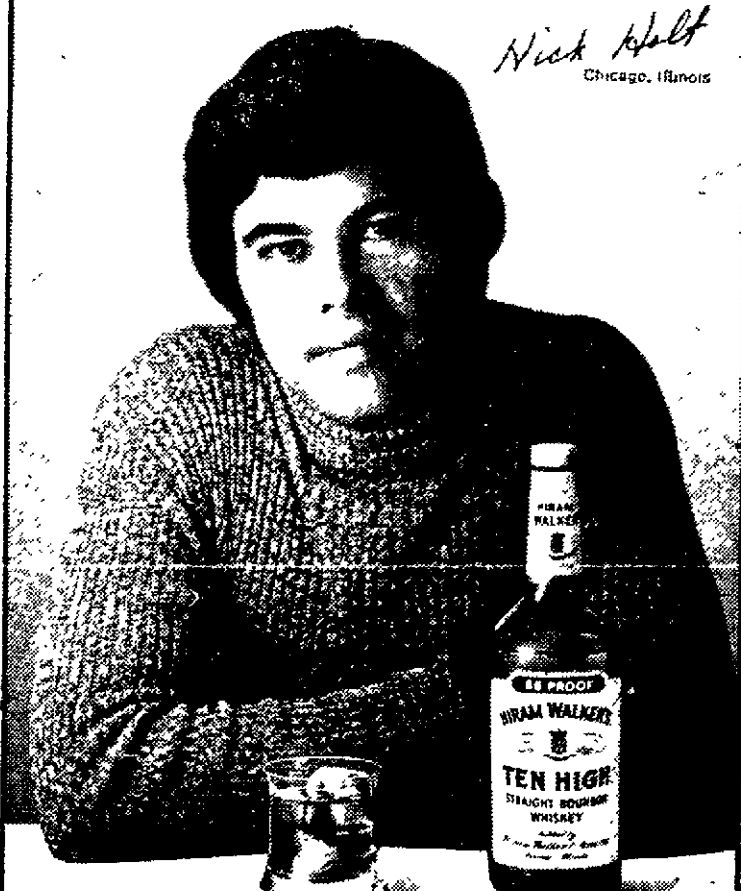

Carlton Fisk walloped a two-run homer in the ninth inning, carrying Boston to a doubleheader sweep over Baltimore.

In the nightcap, the Red Sox pounded loser Dave McNally, and Don Hood for 17 hits.

A's 7, White Sox 3

Angel Mangual blasted a grand-slam homer to help Oakland past Chicago. Jim "Catfish" Hunter stifled the White Sox on four hits before giving way to Paul Lindblad in the eighth. Lindblad gave up Chicago's runs on Brian Downing's three-run homer in the ninth.

over Miller with Sauter placing third Miller, last year's "National Short Track Champion", drove a 1970 Mustang and Sauter a 1973 Nova. Somers finished fourth in a 1973 Mustang followed by Dave Watson of Beloit, winner of the "Red White and Blue State Championship at WIR last year, in a 1973 Joe Shear Camaro and Jim Pierson of Milton in a 1974 Camaro.

Al Schill of Franklin, the race leader for the first 10 laps, finished eighth. The top Fox Valley area driver was Dave Conger, of Oshkosh, in 11th place with his 1973 Camaro.

Sauter set the pace for two laps after gaining the lead from Schill. Miller took over the top spot for one lap before being repassed by Sauter. Miller regained the lead on the 28th lap and remained in the front position until being passed by Dejens on the final lap.

The race was yellow flagged by start Bill Krueger twice. The first caution flag was waved when top qualifier, John Reimer of Caledonia, blew the engine of his 1973 Camaro on the fourth lap. He was the leading qualifier among the 63 entries on hand to participate in the $5,220 racing program.

Another caution period was required on the 17th lap when Beloit's Dan Bellard spun in the first turn and was hit head-on by Don James of Bloomington, Minn. James was unable to continue.

Tony Strupp won the 20-lap semi-feature with a quarter of a lap to spare over Mosinee's Paul Christianson. Annie Christen of Darlington placed third, Don Grant of La Crosse fourth and Bob Abitz, the racing high school teacher from Freedom, fifth.

Darrell Swartwout, a 1973 Mustang driver from Janesville, was the only double winner of the afternoon. He chalked up triumphs in the first heat race and the consolation. In the consolation he was a quarter of a lap winner over Kimberly's Roger Regeth.

Other heat races were won by Christianson and Sauter. The next race in the four-race series is planned June 23.

Lake rescue service is arranged

By ALICE CONNORS
Post-Crescent correspondent

CHILTON — At a special meeting of the Committee of Protection of Persons and Property for the County Friday, temporary measures were taken to provide emergency boat service on Lake Winnebago.

Armin Hernke, Hilbert, and Eugene Kosmosky, Menasha, agreed to furnish rescue service on a temporary basis for the county. The committee approved a fee schedule of $25 for any time accumulating up to the first hour and $8 per hour thereafter, plus cost of gas and oil.

The two men appeared at the special meeting after being contacted by committee members. They noted that they were surprised to be asked, and were not prepared to present a proposal to the committee on providing emergency service.

Calumet County Sheriff Ted Pagel noted that since news articles on the rescue service have appeared, he had received inquiries from several interested parties.

The committee expressed concern, that not just anyone with a boat should be deputized for the work. Pagel informed the committee that a thorough investigation would be made before anyone would be deputized.

Pagel also emphasized that if a contract was accepted for rescue work, not only would the county have liability, but the owner would also be liable in an accident.

Warren Jodar, Chilton, formerly provided rescue service for the county, using his own boat and equipment. Jodar received $20 for the first hour and $5 for every hour thereafter, plus oil and gas. Warren told the committee that if it leases a boat, it should be kept in a readily accessible place and should always be ready to go at a moment's notice.

Jodar, in addition to providing the boat for the county, also supplied all the necessary rescue equipment and had the boat equipped with both a county radio and coast guard radio. He had also completed several courses in first aid and had qualified for training in rescue work. It was noted that Hernke or Kosmosky have no radio communication at this time.

Julius Schmidt, Sherwood, claimed that 90 per cent of the boat traffic on Lake Winnebago starts at Calumet County Park and continues to the north end of the county. Pagel, however, disagreed, saying that just as many boaters from Fond du Lac, Columbia Park and Brother-town, are on the lake.

Kosmosky asked who would give the order as to whether the rescue boat would be called for duty and whether the lake would be safe or not.

Pagel noted that when someone is stranded on the lake every effort must be made to save him, whether the water is rough or not. That's the importance of having a boat that's large enough and properly equipped, he said.

Kosmosky pointed out that if the lake is really rough, he would not be interested in providing the service, risking four or five lives to try to save two.

At a previous meeting of the committee, Jodar had explained that the county could purchase its own boat, rather than lease his, and that the state would pay for the maintenance and operation of the boat for rescue work. The boat itself would be funded at 12½ per cent per year depreciation over an eight year span. Maintenance would be 75 per cent. Cost of a new boat would be about $15,000.

In addition, Jodar noted that 22 week ends should be worked from May 1 to Sept. 28.

Hernke informed the committee that he would help the county in emergencies but would not be available for service at all times.

Summer speech therapy program to get Hilbert board's attention

HILBERT — The board of education is expected to ratify a summer speech therapy program when it meets at 8 p.m. tonight.

The program, under the direction of Martha Becker, is planned for June 10 through July 19. It will focus on pre schoolers, primary students, (parochial and public school children) and others who have been referred for special help.

Cost of the 220 hours for the therapist is $1,000.

The board will also act on a change order for the purchase of lockers at a cost of $20,800 and a change for the roof truss system of the new high school from that originally planned, resulting in a saving of $14,200. The new contract additional cost will be $6,600.

A contract for the Brillion cooperative vocational programs will be ratified for power mechanics, industrial operations, agricultural construction and maintenance and mobile guidance unit.

Other business will involve possible action regarding local funding of the tutorial and perceptual motor skill development programs if the proposed Title I program for secondary reading assistance for public and private school children is approved.

$408 is expected to be renewed. A request by DeCoster Construction for a change in finish hardware at a cost of $594 will be considered.

Spring Creek dredging on agenda Tuesday for Calumet County Board

CHILTON — The Calumet County Board will act on several resolutions when it meets in an adjourned session at 7:45 p.m. Tuesday.

The board will consider a resolution from the Calumet County Planning and Zoning Committee with regard to petitioning the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) to dredge a clear channel in Spring Creek at Brillion.

Brillion residents have expressed concern over the flooding of the Brillion marsh and the continued effect of sedimentation in Spring Creek to the west of the city. They believe that clearing of the channel of Spring Creek will relieve some of the seasonal flooding problems.

Funds have been contributed to the state Department of Natural Resources for the purpose of clearing the channel. In 1972, the county board went on record opposing the building of a dam for water impoundment in the Brillion Marsh and flood of the marsh. The City of Brillion and residents of the Town of Rantoul sportsmen's clubs and other civic groups have expressed their opposition to the flooding of the marsh area.

At almost every information meeting regarding the Brillion Watershed, the concern about opening Spring Creek was discussed. The County Planning and Zoning Committee recommended the resolution after the last of a series of three informational meetings regarding floodplain zoning were held.

The resolution will petition the DNR to dredge a clear channel in Spring Creek from the West City limits of Brillion southwesterly to its junction with the North Branch of the Manitowoc River.

A copy of the resolution will also be sent to Calumet and Manitowoc County legislators for their support.

Also on the agenda will be a resolution creating a county commission on aging. The commission will be created to improve the quality of life for the senior citizens in the county. Members of the commission will be appointed by the county board, subject to confirmation by the county board.

The commission will consist of nine members, with at least five of them, 60 years of age or over and at least one member under the age of 30. No more than three members will be county board supervisors.

Authorization of the purchase of a 3/4-ton truck for the county park at a cost of $4,400, will be recommended by the park commission.

Other items on the agenda include

- Amending the Calumet County Zoning Ordinance on certain lands located in the Town of Brillion from agricultural to commercial which includes one acre.

CLINTONVILLE — The local Future Homemakers of America held its annual Mother-Daughter dinner Thursday evening at the Clint-Mar Supper Club.

Del Wiley, counselor for the Waupaca County Alcoholism and Drug Abuse Council, was the guest speaker. He told of the widespread use of alcohol and the problems created, and his work as a counselor in the program which started in January. He commented that the best thing to mix with alcohol is caution. After his talk, Wiley answered questions from the group.

Awards were presented by Judy

Danke, outgoing president, who was the mistress of ceremonies. Patsy Malueg was named as the delegate to the national FHA convention in Chicago in July. Miss Malueg, Kristy Machmuller, Terri Bodoh and Darlene Wilken were named delegates to the state FHA convention in June at Green Lake. Mary Roland received the award for having been the winning sales person during the FHA candy sales project. A long-stemmed red rose was presented to each senior member.

During the installation ceremony, Miss Malueg was installed as president for the coming year; Miss Bodoh, vice president, and Jane Fraedrich, secretary.

Musical selections were provided during the evening by Cephas Ocloo, Clintonville's American Field Service student from Ghana, who played a native drum, and Julie Arvey, who sang and accompanied herself on the guitar.

Order of Eastern Star honors Job's Daughters

CLINTONVILLE — The Order of Eastern Star here recently honored members of Job's Daughters, Bethel No. 26, at a potluck dinner at the Masonic Temple.

The Singing Strings, a musical group from the United Methodist Church, sang and presented a pantomime skit. Following their performance, the chapter voted to give $10 to the Methodist Church to purchase music for the group.

Each member of Job's Daughters and the Singing Strings was presented with a gift from the Worthy Matron, Mrs. Owen Neilson.

The charter was draped for Brother Virgil Wulfson and Sister Jennie Billings.

The chapter was invited to attend the installation of officers of the Job's Daughters at 8 p.m., June 1 at the Masonic Temple.

The local Masonic Lodge will celebrate its centennial birthday on June 15.

Openings on Harrison sanitary commissions due to resignations

HARRISON — The resignations of Ken Wallace of the Waverly Sanitary District and Mrs. Francis Schneider of the High Cliff Sanitary District were accepted by the town board recently.

Wallace's resignation is due to his moving from the area, while Mrs. Schneider would like to see broader representation on the commission.

Chairman George Schwalbach stated that names of candidates for the two positions should be submitted to Clerk Eugene Haessly, route 4, Kaukauna, to be acted on at the June 10 meeting.

Classes at Chilton will conclude May 31

CHILTON — The Chilton Public Schools will end the 1973-74 school year at 3:35 p.m., Friday, May 31, according to James Skarda, principal. Lunches will be served that day for all students in the public schools and at St. Marys.

May 23 and 24 will also be the annual Bermuda Days conducted by the American Field Service Organization. For a nominal fee, students buy licenses permitting them to wear Bermuda shorts or other attire. The funds help finance next year's visit by a foreign student.

All elementary and junior high school students will receive final report cards on the last day of school. Approximately two weeks after the closing of school, high school students will be able to pick up their report cards at the office.

Book bills must be paid before report cards will be issued. There will be no classes on Memorial Day, May 27. All students with the exception of seniors will report to regular classes on Tuesday, May 28.

The last week of school is designated "senior week" and graduates do not attend classes. Commencement which will be held at 2 p.m. June 2 at Morrissey Field.

The senior dinner at the Altona, May 28, will feature a home style dinner plus various skits and other entertainment reviewing the accomplishments of the class members. Seniors are to report to the gym at 9 a.m. May 31 for commencement rehearsals.

Lions Club to honor Manawa senior class

MANAWA — The Class of 1974 will be honored at 7 p.m. today by the Manawa Lions Club at a banquet at Cedar Springs Resort.

Frank Trantow, Lions president, will welcome the graduates. Jack Sturm will serve as master of ceremonies.

Harold Goetz, high school principal, will introduce both the senior class and the teachers. Guests also include the wives of Lions' members.

Musical selections will be given by seniors Ray Anderson and Dave Pethke. Becky Baumer, Salli Carew, and Florence O'Brien will present a short play. All three girls were members of the senior play cast.

Teacher negotiations resume this afternoon

BY BERNIE PETERSON
Post-Crescent staff writer

Negotiations in the 10-week-old Hortonville teachers' strike were set to resume this afternoon.

Outagamie County Judge R. Thomas Cane announced the resumption of talks this morning after calling off a scheduled hearing on two strike-related orders to show cause.

"Both sides have indicated they are willing to sit down and negotiate," Cane said. He added that Howard Bellman of the Wisconsin Employment Relations Commission had been contacted in Madison and was to arrive in Appleton for the new talks, set to begin at 1 p.m. in Cane's courthouse chambers.

Negotiations were last held April 24.

Cane said no new date has been set for the show cause hearing.

The hearing was to cover a request by the school board to strengthen Cane's earlier order regarding strike activities and to consider a request by the striking Hortonville Education Association teachers to get better access to the school building for removal of their belongings.

In another development, a group of parents of Hortonville students announced it had collected 1,810 signatures on petitions during the weekend.

The petitions, directed to the state Supreme Court, ask the high court to take jurisdiction and order Cane to alter his May 6 order requiring the school board to hire back fired teachers to fill current vacancies. To date, five of these teachers have been rehired.

In addition, the petitions ask the Supreme Court to compel Cane to require the return to the school district the return of the report card records of the students. Also, the parents want the HEA teachers to return keys, teaching materials and other property owned by the district.

In the petitions, the parents claim they will be "irreparably injured" unless the Supreme Court takes jurisdiction and corresponding action to find the HEA in violation of the no-strike and theft provisions of the state statutes.

The petitioners said they "wholeheartedly endorse the actions of the school board and support the notion that the right to make a decision as to the qualifications and hiring of candidates for vacant teaching positions should be exclusively the prerogative of the school board."

A spokesman for the parents said the petitions were circulated during the weekend by 45 persons, and that parents of 1,457, or about 76 per cent, of the school district's students, signed.

He said the move was prompted by an announcement by the HEA that it would distribute grade records of students to the individual parents Wednesday evening at a Town of Grand Chute hall.

The spokesman stressed that the petitioners are not intervenors in any pending court action, but that they have retained the services of a local attorney and collected "sufficient funds" to carry out their activities.

Meanwhile, an estimated 400 picketing teachers and their supporters awarded the state's superintendent of public instruction a degree for "inhumanity" Sunday afternoon at Waukesha's Carroll College.

Mrs. Barbara Thompson was there to receive an honorary doctor of humane letters degree from the school during its commencement exercises. No violence broke out during the picketing.

The large "diploma" picket sign was tied to a utility pole on campus and claimed that Thompson has suppressed teachers' rights and that she favors breaking teacher strikes.

Signs identified the pickets as teachers from schools throughout the southern part of the state.

"They were all gone when I arrived," Thompson said of the pickets, who marched for about 90 minutes.

"I guess they had other things to do."

The picketing represented another chapter of protest by members of the Wisconsin Education Association Council against Mrs. Thompson and her opposition to strikes by teachers.

Teachers who were invited to a two-hour demonstration assembled at a baseball lot under sunny skies, marched to the college and picketed for about 90 minutes.

They left behind a placard, draped on a campus utility post and reading: "Babs tells WEAC 'Eat chalk or stand up and be raised.'"

The WEAC, representing 90 per cent of the state's public school teachers, has demanded Mrs. Thompson resign because her Department of Public Instruction did not intervene in a contract dispute in the Hortonville school district.

She has replied the Wisconsin Employment Relations Commission prefers her department keep out of labor disputes, and that she does not think her state agency should interfere in district matters anyway.

She has denied her department helped the Hortonville school board hire strikebreakers, saying the state has conducted rigid investigations of the credentials of substitutes hired by the board.

Froehlich says courts must rule on subpoena

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wisconsin's freshman congressman, a Republican member of the House Judiciary Committee, says courts ought to decide whether President Nixon releases more data to the impeachment panel.

Rep. Harold V. Froehlich of Appleton, Wis. in a letter Sunday to the committee chairman, Rep. Peter Rodino, said a jurisdictional showdown with the White House should be avoided.

While Nixon's excuses for withholding further tapes may be "utterly lacking in legal merit," the committee too should avoid making assumptions about its legal limits, he said.

"The committee does not have unlimited power to secure evidence from the President," Froehlich said.

"The President should not be the final authority over what he releases to us," Froehlich said, and courts should "settle the fundamental disputes" between Nixon's lawyers and Rodino's committee.

He suggested Nixon may wish to offer several reasons for not divulging evidence, citing the Fifth Amendment, attorney-client privileges, national security and what Nixon calls executive privilege.

Also representing Wisconsin on the Judiciary Committee is Democratic Rep. Robert W. Kastenmeier, who has voted to reject Nixon's argument that the committee's subpoena of data has been satisfied by an edited White House transcript of tape recordings.

Froehlich was one of three Republicans who were absent April 11 while the committee was voting 33-3 to subpoena 41 tapes.

He has denied he is inviting Nixon to campaign for his 8th Congressional District re-election bid this fall, but said he has a "tentative commitment" for help from Vice President Gerald R. Ford.

Froehlich had said in October he feared the Rodino committee's study of grounds for impeachment would turn into a partisan affair between the panel's Democratic and Republican members. He complained in April that the impeachment business is being dragged out too long, saying: "I don't think the committee has been moving fast enough, or that the White House has been cooperating fully enough."

In his statement Sunday, Froehlich said "the time has come to resort to the courts."

"In conducting this investigation," he said, "the committee is entitled to seek all relevant evidence of specified presidential misconduct."

"But it does not necessarily follow that the committee is entitled to receive from the President all the evidence it seeks," he continued.

Note in bottle reaches Nixon

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (AP) — Walking on a deserted beach in the Bahamas, President Nixon found a green-tinged bottle washed ashore amid the seaweed, carrying a message inside.

It had to be broken open to get at the somewhat waterlogged note that read:

"I'm aboard the U.S.S. Guam. I have a watch. I had nothing to do so I'm writing you ... if you find it please write to this address and tell them you found this message from their grandson."

The White House checked out the letter from Larry Metivier after the President found it on his weekend beach stroll with his friends C. G. "Bebe" Rebozo and Robert Abplanalp during a visit to Grand Cay in the Bahamas and found the young man was air man apprentice with a Navy helicopter squadron and had been aboard the Guam being transported from Norfolk, Va., to his present post at Jacksonville, Fla.

Then Sunday night — which happened to be Armed Forces Day — the President made a telephone call to Larry's grandfather, William L. Staples of Havertown, Pa., whose name and address were on the message that was dated March 23 — almost two months ago.

Nixon told about finding the message, and according to a White House spokesman, a somewhat startled grandfather said of his message-writing grandson: "He's a good boy — he's a fine boy. He didn't do anything wrong did he." The President assured Staples that the call from the nation's commander-in-chief didn't involve any trouble, and Nixon said he was proud of the Navy and all the men who serve in it, a White House spokesman related.

He wished Staples well and told him to inform his grandson Larry that the note had been found.

Pat Hearst hunted as 'terrorist'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Patricia Hearst, the soft-spoken coed who screamed "let me go" as she was violently kidnapped 3½ months ago, was hunted today by hundreds of lawmen as an "armed and extremely dangerous" member of the terrorist group which abducted her.

With six of Miss Hearst's alleged captors dead after a series of weekend developments in which the case began to break open, the FBI led a blitzing search in this city today for the remnants of the nearly decimated Symbionese Liberation Army, and for Miss Hearst.

The FBI said Sunday night it would charge Miss Hearst as the woman who pumped automatic rifle fire into a sporting goods store on Thursday, the incident that triggered the army of lawmen into action as they began to close in on the SLA.

The FBI said it believes Miss Hearst, who 106 days ago was pursuing her art studies and quietly planning a summer wedding, to be part of what is left of her captors.

"Apparently she has joined forces with the SLA," William A. Sullivan, assistant director of the Los Angeles FBI office, said of the 20-year-old newspaper heiress Sunday night. He added:

"She will be given the opportunity to surrender. If she opens fire on FBI agents or police, the fire will be returned."

Police said early today all units were seeking a young white woman and two black men "considered armed and dangerous and may be suspected SLA members" who tried to offer "several hundred dollars" to a landlady if she would give them a room Sunday night.

The woman was described as 18 to 20, blonde hair, blue eyes, with a sawed-off shotgun on a sling concealed under her coat. Miss Hearst has brown hair and brown eyes. The men were described as in their 20s, one 6-foot-3 and the other 5-foot-4.

Police said when the landlady refused to rent the room, she was slashed at with a knife. Her clothing was cut but she was unharmed. Her assailants reportedly fled in a red and black sedan.

Named in a warrant charging federal firearms violations were Miss Hearst and William and Emily Harris, a husband and wife in their late 20s. The Harrises are white. Authorities said they were the only three persons still sought because of the SLA, the small band of terrorists who pushed their stated goal of revolution after claiming to have kidnaped Miss Hearst on Feb. 4.

If there was any solid SLA connection with the two black men sought early today, police did not give it.

Six persons, including acknowledged SLA leader Cinque, are dead, victims of a Friday night shootout with an estimated 500 law officers that lasted more than an hour before their hideout house burned. When the charred remains of all six were finally identified by Sunday afternoon, the dead included what was believed to be all the top leaders of the SLA, which now appears to have never numbered more than a dozen.

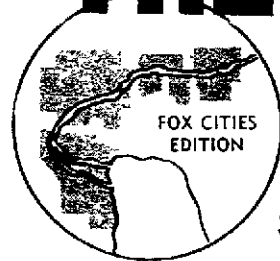

In tape recordings issued as the country's first political kidnapping unfolded, Miss Hearst pledged her allegiance to the SLA, renounced her family, ridiculed her fiancé and repeated the violent SLA goals of revolution on behalf of the people. But her family always said it believed the statements were coerced. Most authorities appeared to believe that, until this weekend.

Formal complaints were to be filed today against Miss Hearst and the Harrises, who Sullivan said he believed were still in Southern California. A youth who identified Miss Hearst for the FBI said she told him she raked a sporting goods store with rifle fire as she and the Harrises made their getaway after a bungled attempt to shoplift a pair of 49-cent socks.

Randolph A. Hearst, Patricia's father, was "taking it pretty badly" and was not expected to have any comment until later.

Newsman to testify for reporter

LOS ANGELES (AP) — TV anchorman Walter Cronkite and several other top reporters are testifying in support of a colleague who is risking another jail term in order to keep confidential news sources secret.

CBS anchorman Cronkite is one of several top reporters scheduled to appear at the court hearing which begins today to determine whether William Farr, a Los Angeles Times reporter who has served 46 days in jail, can be imprisoned again.

Farr's planned witness list also included NBC-TV White House correspondent Tom Brokaw, Los Angeles Times' Washington reporter Jack Nelson and New York Times' San Francisco bureau chief Wallace Turner. Nelson and Turner are Pulitzer Prize winners.

The issue on which they will be asked to testify is whether Farr, in refusing to reveal sources of a story during the Manson trial, was following an established ethical and moral principle of journalism.

The case, which has been in litigation more than three years, involves a demand by Manson trial judge Charles H. Older that Farr tell him which two of six attorneys in that trial violated a court order by giving Farr information for a story. Farr refused, saying he promised his sources confidentiality and could not break that trust.

Further complicating the situation, the six attorneys took the stand before Superior Court Judge Older and swore they were not the sources. This made two of them eligible for perjury charges if Farr named them.

With Older running against two opponents for re-election and one of the attorneys a candidate for the state Democratic attorney general nomination, the case also has become a political issue.

Kissinger working on last details

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Details of a general agreement to separate Israeli and Syrian forces on the Golan Heights began trickling out today as Secretary of State Henry Kissinger arrived for discussions with Syrian leaders to overcome the few remaining obstacles.

A senior American official said a buffer zone separating the two armies will vary in depth from less than half a mile to a little over one mile.

According to this official, Israel has agreed to permit Syrian policemen to re-enter towns and villages within the demilitarized zone along with Syrian civilians.

Newsman also were told on the one-hour flight from Jerusalem that verification of the thinning out of armor immediately behind the disengagement lines would not cause a problem because the distances involved are not great.

Now in the 22nd day of his marathon peace mission, Kissinger brought to Damascus Israel's approval of his proposals to separate the opposing forces, which the Israeli negotiating team gave Sunday.

The Syrians accepted the plan Saturday, making final agreement by the end of the week appear a certainty.

With agreement on the troublesome question of a separation line, the focus of negotiations now is expected to shift toward subsidiary problems like the composition of a United Nations contingent to man a buffer zone between the opposing forces, the thinning out of firepower and an exchange of war prisoners.

Kissinger said he expected to remain in the Middle East at least until Friday, shuttling almost daily between the two countries. He scheduled his eighth session today with Syrian President Hafez Assad and Foreign Minister Abdel Halim Khaddam in Damascus.

He returns to Jerusalem in the evening to meet with Premier Golda Meir and other Israeli leaders.

"You can assume this will be the pattern" over the next few days, said Robert Anderson, a State Department spokesman.

Informed sources said the Kissinger compromise centered on U.N. control of the peak of Mt. Hermon, with Israeli and Syrian units maintaining positions along the slopes. It also was said to include the return of the city of Quneitra to Syrian civilian authority and Israeli withdrawal from three abandoned Arab villages in the Quneitra area, which is just behind the cease-fire lines drawn after the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

The sources said that under the plan, the United States would help guard against violations by using satellites and other means to inspect Israeli and Syrian troop movements and equipment in the contested region.

Ehrlichman count might be dropped

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge, saying the FBI "plays cat and mouse" with people it is investigating today indicated he is considering dismissing one charge brought against former presidential aide John D. Ehrlichman in the White House Plumbers case.

U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell raised the question in reference to a charge that Ehrlichman lied to the FBI about his knowledge of the White House Plumbers unit's investigation of the Pentagon Papers case.

Gesell said that an FBI memo summarizing the interview with Ehrlichman did not make it clear whether the agent asked Ehrlichman about the "Pentagon Papers case" or, more specifically, about the break-in at the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

Ehrlichman told the FBI more than a year had elapsed since he had seen papers relating to the Pentagon Papers investigation. Gesell said that might have been correct if Ehrlichman was referring to the original case brought against Ellsberg.

Ehrlichman and five others were indicted by a grand jury on March 7, 1974 on charges of conspiring to violate the civil rights of Dr. Louis Fielding, a Beverly Hills psychiatrist who had treated Ellsberg.

The Plumbers unit allegedly engineered the break-in in an attempt to put together a psychological profile of Ellsberg. Ellsberg was then under indictment on charges stemming from the leak of the Pentagon Papers.

In addition, Ehrlichman was indicted on one count of lying to the FBI and three counts of lying to the grand jury.

The other defendants are Charles W. Colson, former White House special counsel; Felipe de Diego, a Cuban exile now living in Miami, and three Watergate conspirators, G. Gordon Liddy, Bernard L. Barker and Eugenio R. Martinez.

Meanwhile, Watergate was said to be hurting Republican fund raising efforts, and President Nixon's chief of staff Alexander M. Haig Jr. was quoted as saying he was so disturbed by the transcripts of the Watergate tapes that he had to reevaluate his job.

Haig, however, denied the Newsweek report through an aide as "totally false."

"Gen. Haig has never implied the need to re-evaluate his position and he challenges Newsweek to support this report," his associate said from the Florida White House at Key Biscayne.

The fund raising problems were discussed by Republican leaders in separate interviews Sunday.

Sen. William Brock, R-Tenn., chairman of the Senate Republican Campaign Committee, said, "I'm having a great deal of trouble raising money."

He was interviewed with Rep. Robert Michel, head of the House Republican Campaign Committee, on NBC's "Meet the Press." Both said Nixon should not resign even if impeached by the House.

GOP chairman George Bush, interviewed on ABC's "Issues and Answers," also said Nixon should not resign. The country, Bush said, "should leave aside political expediency and see the (impeachment) process through."

Michel also said he was "unalterably opposed" to resignation.

The main arguments before Gesell, to be heard Tuesday, will be whether the six men charged can use national security as a defense to the conspiracy charges.

Gesell has said that if it can be proven foreign policy was involved he might have to dismiss the charges. Among those charged are former top Nixon aides John D. Ehrlichman and Charles W. Colson.

In another case, Judge Barrington Parker refused to dismiss a perjury indictment or transfer to a California court the perjury case involving Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke of California.

A three-count indictment returned April 3 accuses Reinecke of lying to a federal grand jury about certain details of his role in helping to arrange for the 1972 Republican national convention in San Diego, Calif. The convention later was shifted to Miami Beach, Fla.

At a pre-trial hearing last week, Reinecke's attorneys argued that he had been trapped and misled by Watergate prosecutors into believing he would not be indicted if he agreed to cooperate and testify.

In support of the motion to move the July 15 trial to San Francisco or Sacramento, Reinecke testified he could not afford to bring witnesses needed in his defense to Washington.

He opposes state controller Houston I. Flourney in the June 4 primary for governor and his attorneys in California have said he wants to get his trial over with before then.

John J. Sirica, the judge most involved in Watergate matters, also had a busy week ahead in four different areas.

He was expected to rule on whether President Nixon must turn over tape recordings of 64 conversations to special prosecutor Leon Jaworski, who has subpoenaed them for the Sept. 9 trial of seven Watergate cover-up defendants.

He also promised to release the long-awaited experts' report on causes of an 18½ minute gap in a tape surrendered earlier by the White House. The release depended on when the report, turned over to Sirica last week, was printed.

Watch over endangered species

Among the animals

Keith Parcher, deputy chief of operations, law enforcement division, of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, stands among property seized because of violations of the endangered species laws. (AP Wirephoto)

WASHINGTON (AP) — The old Duck Cop of the Fish and Wildlife Service is turning into a sort of environmental G-Man.

Instead of big heroin or 10-most-wanted busts, the big case around the service's Law Enforcement Division is likely to be seizure of a cheetah fur coat or a shipment of hawksbill turtle shell hair clips.

That's because the main beat for the division's 220 special agents is policing the endangered species list — and agents believe their beat is starting to involve organized crime.

The traffic in illicit fur, shell and feather from species on the lengthy list is approaching dope-scale profits.

A single eagle tail feather is worth $50. A tiger skin coat recently was valued at $30,000. A pair of Nile crocodile shoes is worth $125, and a live peregrine falcon can be worth $10,000 to a falconry buff, the service says.

The division's stepped-up effort, says Director Clark Bavan, "has been necessary in part to focus on the large-scale traffickers and smugglers of wildlife."

The attraction for organized crime — besides the money — is the lesser risk, along with the comparatively light penalties Congress provided in its endangered species laws, says division Deputy Director Bertram Falbaum.

"If you can get $50,000, $100,000, $200,000, dealing in misdemeanor instead of felony crimes, why not," says Falbaum. "We're convinced organized crime is involved."

Falbaum declines to give specifics, saying several cases are under investigation. But, he says, organized crime's role likely involves financing big fur buys and shipments.

To get on with its new responsibilities, the division is recruiting a mix of ex-FBI,

Customs Bureau, police and military intelligence men. Falbaum used to run Customs' Operation Intercept against narcotics traffic on the West Coast.

Agents' training combines law enforcement techniques with cram courses on how to look at a shoe and say if it's made of American alligator, caiman, orinoco or Nile crocodile.

In the old days, the division was heavy with biologists and game warden-types who banded ducks and stalked hunters who shot more than their limit — thus the tag, Duck Cops.

But in recent years Congress has tightened up several species protection laws and added new ones, giving the added enforcement tasks to the division.

Under a law that went into effect in December, the sale of endangered species or their byproducts across state lines largely is illegal.

There are exceptions in the law, but it's possible that an ocelot fur coat on sale in a department store, or even the egret feathers in a floral spray may be illegally offered.

Part of the time, agents say, a store owner will not know that he is trafficking in illegal goods.

An injunction the division won against the B. Altman and Cartier stores in New York banned further sale of tortoise shell jewelry, but also required the stores to instruct their employees three times yearly of the type of wildlife products they were to avoid stocking.

So far the service has confiscated goods worth $2 million by its estimate. The haul includes one stuffed Andean condor, 20,000 cans of sperm whale meat and 1,200 pairs of Nile crocodile shoes. Some 1,400 live alligator-like caimans are cooling it in a zoo until a divorce case against their shippers is settled.

Nixon needs to build support, Ford admits

WASHINGTON (AP) —Vice President Gerald R. Ford says that if moves to impeach President Nixon are defeated, the President then would need successes in foreign and domestic policy to recover lost public support.

"I think if the President and Henry Kissinger are successful in the Middle East ... and I think the prospects are fairly encouraging, I think that would be most helpful," Ford said in an interview with The Associated Press.

Ford said the public's views "move back and forth very quickly and there still is no better issue for any President than peace, particularly if they have the im-

Plan for insurance is backed

KEY BISCAVNE, Fla. (AP) —President Nixon is making a new pitch for his national health insurance plan as the Senate prepares to launch committee hearings on rival insurance legislation.

Nixon scheduled a nationwide radio address for 12:07 p.m. EDT today. He has delivered a series of similar talks this year following midday network newscasts.

The Senate Finance Committee begins hearings Tuesday on the administration's health care package, as well as on competing bills sponsored by Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff, D-Conn., and jointly by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark.

Kennedy scaled down his health plan this year to win acceptance by Mills and to enable him to claim his bill would cost no more than the administration proposal. Both would be comprehensive in approach, whereas the Ribicoff bill focuses on costly illnesses.

The President was planning to return to Washington Monday night after a four-day weekend here and in the Bahamas. He apparently spent much of his time relaxing but reportedly kept in close touch with the Middle East peace mission of Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

Nixon is to meet at the White House Tuesday with Japanese Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira.

The Florida White House said Nixon spent part of Sunday working on his radio speech, then went for an afternoon cruise aboard the houseboat Coco Lob II, owned by his friend and neighbor C. G. "Bebe" Rebozo.

Joining the President and Rebozo were Mrs. Nixon, daughter Tricia Cox and Robert Abplanalp, Nixon's host for an overnight stay Friday on the Bahamian island of Grand Cay.

Nixon placed a transatlantic call Sunday night to French President-elect Valéry Giscard d'Estaing, extending congratulations on his election victory.

Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said Nixon told d'Estaing he "looked forward to working with him in the future and to the continuing good relationship between the United States and France."

pression that he is the principal architect of it."

Dramatic success in domestic issues would be more difficult "because you don't turn a spigot and end inflation," said the vice president.

But, he added, "if the economy stays strong, if unemployment doesn't group, if people are feeling happier about their economic prospects, I think that would help, but not as dramatically as something involving peace."

Ford said he thinks the odds are about even that the House Judiciary Committee will vote to impeach the President. But he said he still believes the House will reject an impeachment resolution.

Ford said April 15, 1970, that "an impeachable offense is whatever a majority of the House of Representatives considers it to be at a given moment in history."

At the time, Ford was Republican leader of the House and was pushing for the impeachment of Associate Justice William O. Douglas.

Ford advocated then that "a higher standard is expected of federal judges than of any other 'civil officers' of the United States."

"The President and vice president and all persons holding office at the pleasure of the President can be thrown out of office by the voters at least every four years. To remove them in mid-term — it has been tried only twice and never done — would indeed require crimes of the magnitude of treason and bribery."

As for the allegations against President Nixon, Ford said "the weight of the evidence overwhelmingly indicates to me the President neither knew of the Watergate break-in (and) ... he had no knowledge of the cover-up until Dean told him on March 21."

"Now you can take certain excerpts and I guess a skillful lawyer could build a case. But if you take all of the evidence, in my judgment, the overwhelming weight of the evidence is in favor of the President."

Ford conceded that if some predictions about the 1974 congressional elections prove correct, Democratic victories could produce a Congress able to easily override a Republican President's vetoes.

It would create a "legislative dictatorship" and "that, of course, means any President, Nixon or anybody else, would be virtually handcuffed by the Congress."

Pat Hearst hunted

today, said a spokesman at the family home in Hillsborough, Calif.

Hearst, president and editor of the San Francisco Examiner, had already endured tense waits while authorities determined if any of four dead women in a fire-gutted house was his daughter.

First there was a wait of 20 hours until the charred bodies of the first three women found in the rubble of the house after the Friday shoot-out were identified. Then there was a wait of about three hours after a body of another white woman was found Sunday morning.

The dead included Donald David DeFreeze, 30, the SLA leader known as Cinque; Nancy Ling Perry, 26, the group's theoretician; and SLA members Patricia "Mizmoon" Soltysik, 24; Camilla Hall, 29; Angela Atwood, 25, and William Wolfe, 23.

The discovery of Miss Hall's charred body, which was not found until Sunday morning, meant the battle and fire had ended the lives of the best-known SLA members.

DeFreeze was an ex-convict whose voice was most often heard on the tapes spelling out SLA demands. Miss Soltysik, a woman's rights activist, and Mrs. Perry, a former high school cheerleader, belly dancer and one-time supporter of Sen. Barry Goldwater, were believed to be the principal theoreticians and writers of the SLA's quasi-Marxist political philosophy.

Exploded cartridge belts were found around the disfigured bodies of Miss Soltysik, Mrs. Perry and Miss Hall. The county coroner said Miss Hall died of gunshot wounds in the head, as did DeFreeze. He said tests were being conducted to find out if any of the victims had committed suicide as their hideout crumbled in flames Friday.

In addition to Miss Hearst and the Harrises, the only other known fugitive still at large was Thero Wheeler, an escaped convict who knew DeFreeze in prison and who was identified in published reports as one of the persons who dragged Miss Hearst from her Berkeley apartment on Feb. 4. Wheeler's girlfriend said recently that he has broken with the group.

Sullivan said he was not sure if the Harrises were the last SLA members left. The band at one time was thought to number 25, but less than a dozen members were known publicly.

Meanwhile, authorities released Christine Johnson, 35, who ran from the besieged house during the Friday gun battle, and had been booked for investigation of harboring criminals. The charges were dropped.

Her 18-year-old son, James, told the Los Angeles Times he had talked with a woman he identified as Miss Hearst in the house less than 24 hours before the holocaust that killed the others.

James said the woman affirmed her allegiance to the SLA and that she told him: "They'll have to kill me before I go back, I'm not going back there."

He said the woman left the house Thursday night with two black men who said "they were just getting away from the heat."

There was no indication which two black men could be involved.

But early today lawmen flocked back to the neighborhood of the Friday shootout after receiving a report that two black men and a white woman had offered a woman "several hundred dollars" to allow them to rent a room. They said the

Poll finds significant confidence in country despite national leaders

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) —The latest Gallup Poll, taken at a time of discontent with the President and Congress, indicates more than two-thirds of Americans have "quite a lot" of confidence in the nation's future.

Sixty-eight per cent of 1,537 adults interviewed March 29-April 1 expressed the high degree of confidence, 19 per cent had woman refused and that before fleeing at least one of the persons tried to slash her with a knife, but did not injure her.

They said it was "possibly connected" with the SLA.

On April 3 Miss Hearst declared her allegiance to the SLA, and called her father "a liar" for his statements about the $2 million free food program he and the Hearst Corp. paid for in an attempt to gain her release. She called herself "Tania" of the SLA.

The FBI's informant, Tom Dean Matthews, 18, said a woman he identified as Miss Hearst and two other persons — the Harrises — held him for more than 12 hours Friday after commandeering his van truck in a getaway from the sporting goods store shooting. He said the woman called herself Tania and said she was a willing participant in the April 15 bank holdup in San Francisco which netted more than $10,000.

DeFreeze and three of the dead women — Perry, Hall and Soltysik — were charged in warrants with the holdup and Miss Hearst, who was pictured inside the bank holding a rifle during the holdup, was named in a $500,000 material witness warrant. Sullivan said information about Miss Hearst's participation in that bank robbery would be presented to a grand jury in San Francisco today.

Sullivan also disclosed that a second man, Frank Richard Sutter, was abducted after Matthews was released about 6:30 a.m. Friday. The FBI agent said Sutter was kidnapped when Miss Hearst and the Harrises allegedly commandeered his Lincoln Continental.

He was released about noon Friday in the Griffith Park area north of downtown Los Angeles, and he later found his car nearby. Sullivan said Sutter identified "one or more of the trio."

It was the sporting goods store shooting Thursday that alerted police that SLA members were in Los Angeles, sparking a manhunt that led to a house in predominantly black south-central Los Angeles where Friday's fierce gun battle and fire took place.

Along with six bodies, investigators found 18 guns, three bayonets, one pipe-bomb and a large quantity of ammunition in the burned-out house. Among the weapons were three .30-caliber M2 automatic rifles, a Browning automatic rifle, eight sawed-off shotguns, two Mauer rifles and two .38 caliber pistols.

The FBI said agents found in the rubble a Social Security card belonging to Miss Hearst, a credit card belonging to her and a credit card belonging to her fiancé, Stephen Weed.

NOTICE TO APPLETON WATER CUSTOMERS

The Appleton Water Department's annual Flushing Program will be on May 20th thru May 24th. The flushing will be done during the day from 8:00 A.M. to 4:30 P.M.

This main flushing will remove most of the natural minerals, such as iron that are harmless but will discolor the water. If you see the men working in your area, use as little or, if possible, no water for ½ to ¾ of an hour to insure that the water has settled down and that the discoloration is not drawn into your water system.

Should you find discoloration in your water system, again stop using water, wait the ½ to ¾ of an hour, then draw off the discolored water through the cold water only.

Your help and cooperation in this program will benefit all water consumers.

"some" confidence, 10 per cent had "very little," 2 per cent had none and 1 per cent offered no opinion.

The survey showed differences in age, sex, race and level of formal education were reflected in sharp differences in responses to the question: "How much confidence do you have in the future of the United States: Quite a lot, some, very little or none at all?"

This survey was made at a time when ratings of Congress and the President were at low points. A recent Gallup poll indicated only 30 per cent of voters approved of the way Congress was doing its job, with 47 per cent disapproving and 23 per cent undecided. The same survey showed President Nixon's approval rating at 25 per cent, matching his previous low point.

Analysis of the demographic groups indicated that persons most likely to say they have "quite a lot" of confidence were men, 50 years of age or older, white, with at least a high school education.

Those least likely to express a high degree of confidence in the future of the nation were between the ages of 18 and 29, black and with less than a college background.

According to the poll, 72 per cent of whites interviewed expressed much confidence in the nation's future, 17 per cent some confidence, 9 per cent "very little" and 1 per cent none. Another 1 per cent expressed no opinion.

Of the non-whites questioned, 45 per cent expressed a high degree of confidence, 30 per cent "some," 18 per cent "very little," and 5 per cent none. Two per cent offered no opinion.

Fifty-three per cent of persons between the ages of 18 and 29 expressed a high level of confidence, compared to 72 per cent of those 30 to 49 and 75 per cent of those 50 and older.

The poll also showed women slightly less optimistic about the nation's future than men. Of women interviewed, 64 per cent expressed "quite a lot" of confi-

7 drown in runaway car

SABINE PASS, Tex. (AP) —Seven persons drowned when their runaway car plunged into Texas Bayou near here on the upper Texas coast.

Jim Bohler Sr. of Kountze, Tex., one of three survivors in a family party of 10, said, "I dived in once but the water was swift."

Bystanders restrained Bohler from further rescue efforts.

Killed in the Sunday night accident were Bohler's parents-in-law, Benson Cloud, 58, and Mertie Cloud, 49, of Sulphur, La.; the couple's daughter-in-law, Frances G. Cloud, 25, and her children, Scotty, 7, and Todd, 5, of Oakdale, La.; and two of Bohler's children, Tisha, 2, and Jim Jr., 3.

Bohler said he and brother-in-law Benson Cloud Jr., who had been driving, stepped from their parked car and left the engine idling. Suddenly the automobile lurched forward, hit another parked vehicle and gained speed as if someone inside hit the accelerator by accident while reaching for the brake, witnesses said.

It then ran onto a boat ramp and plunged into the water. It floated briefly and Bohler's wife Dorothy, 25, managed to escape before the car sank with the others trapped inside.

dence, 22 per cent "some," 11 per cent "very little" and 1 per cent none. Two per cent offered no opinion.

Seventy-two per cent of the men interviewed expressed great confidence, 16 per cent "some," 9 per cent "very little" and 3 per cent none.

Of people with college backgrounds, 77 per cent said they have "quite a lot" of confidence, 17 per cent expressed "some" "some," 4 per cent "very little," 1 per cent none and 1 per cent offered no opinion. Among those with high school backgrounds 66 per cent had a high level of confidence, 20 per cent "some," 11 per cent "very little," 2 per cent none and 1 per cent offered no opinion.

How to cut taxes

Wisconsin Sen. Gaylord Nelson says income taxes should be cut by $7 billion a year and that there are tax reforms which can cover that total.

If the nation is to have an election-year tax cut, this is the right approach. As Nelson points out, a tax cut which adds to the national deficit and thereby fuels the fires of inflation would be "a cruel hoax on the very people it purports to help."

"This may be good election year politics, but it is bad economics — bad for the country and bad news for the taxpayer," Nelson said.

Along the same line, a committee of former government officials headed by Paul Warnke, former assistant secretary of defense, reported last week that the Pentagon's pending budget could be cut by $11 billion. One of the panel's conclusions was that the military budget includes pump priming money to combat a recession. Certainly if the government concludes it must be in the pump-priming business in the next fiscal year, there are more pressing human national needs for spending than for weapons the Warnke committee says are not needed.

Nelson's reforms would come down hardest on the oil industry — an end to the depletion allowance and an end to oil companies reducing their American taxes because of taxes paid overseas. This will have to be measured against investment money needed to combat the energy crisis.

But Nelson also lists a tightening up of the minimum tax paid by wealthy persons and tax breaks received through government corporations involved in international trade and in trade in the Western Hemisphere.

The Nelson and Warnke blueprints suggest what taxpayers have been saying for a long time: There are plenty places to cut spending if Congress and the administration would do more than just talk about it.

It is another reason Congress should get its house in order with a proposed reform for new committees to work within annual spending ceilings and to think about tax cuts as more than something which might help incumbents in the November elections.

The long effects of malnutrition

The Senate's Select Committee on Nutrition and Human Needs has been studying the impact of malnutrition. It apparently extends beyond the present generation.

A human baby's brain cells develop during the last few months of life in the uterus and until he is about 1½ years old. Studies have tended to show that protein lack, especially during these months, causes brain damage that is permanent. It may also indirectly contribute to the same type of damage in future generations.

The committee report shows that there are approximately 150,000 reported mentally defective children born in the United States every year. Between 75 and 85 per cent of these children are born in poverty. The sole cause may not be malnutrition. Sociologists are unable to determine how much retardation is the result of social deprivation. But the two often go together and tend to perpetuate each other. Poorly nourished parents haven't the energy to provide social stimulation. The retarded don't eat right even if they can afford it, but especially when they can't.

More than that, poorly fed women tend to give birth to small or premature babies which are more likely to die in infancy. Those who survive are more likely to suffer from physical or behavior problems as they mature. If they are girls, their own physical lacks may prevent them from nourishing their own children properly, both before and after birth. And so it goes. Some scientists also reported to the committee that very likely growth retardation and susceptibility to infectious diseases increase with malnutrition.

In the United States there are few cases of the extreme malnutrition that happens in places like Bangladesh, Biafra or the drought-ridden African lands. So far there is little agreement about how permanent the effects of mild or moderate malnutrition may be. It seems reasonable that they can also be mild and moderate but nonetheless important. They are also expensive.

Those who automatically reject financial help to the poor because of alleged welfare cheating or inequities would oppose more government nutritional help. But in the long run it may be economically wise as well as humanly compassionate. Every state in the country spends many millions of dollars on programs or institutions for the mentally retarded. Better food might help to cut the costs.

60-story monuments

Back East in Boston, a 60-story glass-fronted office building has stood vacant since 1971. The glass panels kept cracking and falling to the street — quite an embarrassment for its owner, an insurance company.

More than 5,000 glass panels, each measuring 4.5 by 12 feet, cracked and fell out, which somebody has figured totaled 16 acres of glass surface. The glass was replaced by enough plywood to build 30 houses, and the plywood was painted black to meet fire regulations. So what was to have been the pride of Boston's skyline is quite an eyesore.

Now, it's reported that architects, engineers, weather experts and glass makers have figured out what was wrong. But they haven't been allowed to say what it was because there are a lot of damage claims to be settled in court.

One thing is for sure. More than 10,000 large panes of glass, with a $6 million price tag, must be hauled up into the building on its single freight elevator.

There must be a message there someplace about man's genius in making over his environment.

Air pollution deadlines

Japan, a nation much more at the mercy of the Arab oil supply than is the United States, has decided to stick with automobile air pollution standards similar to those in the American clean air law.

Congress now is acting on amendments to weaken the law or to push back its deadlines, the argument being that the United States must make a new bargain with air pollution because of the energy crisis. The decision of the Japanese government to enforce its deadlines over the next two years should become part of the American debate.

The schedule for Japan calls for a reduction of carbon monoxide and hydrocarbon emissions to one-tenth of their present levels beginning in April of 1975. This would apply to all new cars manufactured in Japan after that date. The effective date for older cars to reach the same standards would be December of 1975. Foreign-made cars and two cycle engine cars would have to reach the standards by April of 1976.

The estimate is that by March of 1978 automobile pollution in the area around Tokyo, which has 7.6 million vehicles, will decline to 1967 levels, when the total of vehicles in the area was one-third less.

Air pollution deadlines are among national objectives placed in sudden jeopardy by the energy crisis. The message from gas-short Japan is that there need not be total retreat.

State Republicans fail to define issues

MADISON — As a leader in the Republican minority caucus of the state Assembly, it was perhaps natural that Rep. John Alberts of Waukesha County should have made the only serious effort during the Republican party's candidate endorsement convention to define prospective state campaign issues.

It was predictable also that the otherwise articulate Alberts was silent altogether about the anguish within the party that has resulted in the crisis of Washington and the movement for the impeachment of the head of the Republican national administration.

The Alberts recitation to some persons may appear somewhat shopworn. It includes complaints that minority Republicans in the Assembly, and to a less effective degree the majority Republicans of the State Senate, have uttered ad infinitum since the administration of Gov. Patrick Lucey took over the state Capitol more than three years ago.

It includes:

1. The claim that the state Democratic regime is undermining the legitimate authority of local government in the state and thus has shown doubt about "the rights of the people."
2. The charge that the governor and his party are inordinately concerned with the centralization of power in Madison, and more expressly, in the hands of the state executive, as shown by the erosion of local government authority and the demand — thus far denied — for direct control by the governor of the major operating agencies of the state.

3. The forecast that the level of expenditures and the expansion of the role of the state in the affairs of localities have inflated expenditures so far beyond the normal degree that a brutal rise in state taxation is inevitable during the next four years if the Democratic regime is given another lease on the statehouse.

4. The claim that Lucey and his men have "preached austerity" while they have inflated state expenditure authorizations and have tacitly consented — through absence of resistance — to exorbitant salary increases for legislators and a "77 per cent salary increase for the governor." (These, of course, won't take effect until the legislators and the governor and others start new terms, and so the election to some degree may be measured as a referendum on the legitimacy of such admittedly generous adjustments by a regime that has talked so often about "austerity.")

John Alberts also finds it ironical that the state regime boasts about improvements in the economic climate of Wisconsin while it has done nothing to adjust the state's rank and its reputation for levying the highest, or among the highest, of the state income taxes in the United States.

The voter will be the judge of the validity of such questions, especially at a time of national absorption with the tragic and bitter drama in Washington that may dominate all else, nationally and provincially, in the campaign dialogues of the year.

But the speculation may be permitted, perhaps, that the sting has been removed from the high per capita income tax by the income tax withholding scheme which tends to make "take home" pay the measure of individual earnings. Meanwhile, Republicans do not choose to mention other Lucey tax innovations — despite the pressure from them which led to their acceptance — such as the bonus to the business community in the unexpected and generous exemption of manufacturing machinery and equipment from the onerous property tax.

Rep. Glenn Davis, Alberts' Waukesha County neighbor, probably was more candid in his remarks to the rally of Republican loyalists when he grumbled sarcastically that the governor used the state's share of federal revenue sharing, representing a higher national debt, "to throw a crumb to business."

New York isn't American city

Spending a weekend in New York last month—to attend the "Tony" Awards and see a few plays—I was sitting in the theater one night when the man in front of me turned to his wife and said loudly: "They may like this play in New York, but the rest of the country won't. After all, New York really isn't an American city."

She nodded and beamed at him, immensely proud of his original and acute observation. It was true enough, of course, but true in a way he had never thought about.

Rather than deploring its differences from the country at large, we should be pleased that New York isn't an "American city" like Omaha or Spokane. After all, we have hundreds of Omahas and Spokanes, and while they may be nice towns, and necessary, they all contribute pretty much the same sort of conventional things to our national life.

One of the truest signs of growth and greatness in a country is a cosmopolitan and creative city like New York, with all its vexations and faults. Almost all our theater comes from here, most of our serious music, and much of our best painting. It's almost the only place in America that a practitioner or performer in the arts can make a living.

Every genuinely civilized country has one city like New York. If we fancy that Paris is a "French city" like Lyons or Bordeaux, we are very much mistaken. Colette, the French writer, who knew Paris better than almost anyone else, remarked that what gives the city its distinctive quality is that it is inhabited largely by provincials and foreigners who settled there.

The Germans, under Hitler, tried to make Berlin a "German city" and almost succeeded, with disastrous results for the cultural life of the country. And Moscow, of course, is a thoroughly "Russian city"—which is to say, it is as dull and conformist as all other Communist communities.

This is the difference between a stagnant nation and a vital one. New York changes the foreigners, and the foreigners change New York—and the combination is, on the whole, a good and healthful condition. Omaha and Spokane could use a little more of it.

I prefer not to live in New York myself, because my roots are elsewhere. But I am glad that New York is not an "American city" in the commonly accepted sense of the word—glad that America, like every really civilized nation, has a city that attracts the most creative people from everywhere. With all its obvious drawbacks, New York is a testimonial to the individualism we preach but fear to practice in other communities.

Potomac fever—

Leaving the House Rules Committee intact in reforming Congress is like building a modern, solar-heated, air conditioned home with an outhouse in back.

The House voted to create a U.S. Fire Academy to train men in the latest methods of flame control and arson investigation. Testing grounds will be either the CIA or State Department.

Let us pray for Republic

Let us pray for the Republic: Apparently the White House staff and the Democratic leadership are in agreement that President Nixon should not resign but should rather undergo impeachment proceedings. And since neither of these groups—the Nixon staff or the Congressional leadership—has demonstrated much competence or perspicacity over the last year, they may be steering the United States toward unanticipated political chaos.

Granted that resignation is not a tidy solution. From Congress's point of view, it would leave issues unresolved, and undoubtedly set the scene for arguments that Mr. Nixon had been hounded out of office — without adequate proof — by a cabal of liberal media and politicians. From the White House point of view, resignation would be a virtual confession of guilt, an exposure to criminal prosecution (if no deal had been struck), and it would spare the Democrats the burden of actually "biting the bullet" on framing impeachment articles and securing a conviction.

Negotiating a deal

Having stated these arguments, I can see the logic of White House anti-resignation insistence (if Mr. Nixon is guilty, the answer lies in negotiating a deal — like the Treaty of Fontainebleau that let Napoleon abdicate and go to Elba — rather than in resigning).

But Congress is playing for dangerous stakes. Perhaps they really have the goods on the President, in which case they may — just possibly — minimize a post-impeachment backlash. Alternatively, and this is my feeling, impeachment will focus a national trauma of much greater magnitude than Presidential resignation.

At the risk of being premature, here are two of the more likely scenarios:

Guilt: Sometime during the summer the House votes articles of impeachment by a two-to-one margin and throws the legal hot potato to the Senate. Mr. Nixon is thereupon tried by the Senate, and convicted (by 69 votes to 31) after a fierce, bitter debate. Pro Nixon forces then charge that no conclusive proof of criminal behavior was ever produced, and that conviction was largely political. In the meantime, a half dozen U.S. Senators are badly soiled — with one or two exposed to possible prosecution — by a last-minute White House campaign resembling the old equity court argument that the case should be dismissed because the Senate itself lacks "clean hands." After such a trial, the backlash potential would be enormous, with President Ford conceivably restating his belief that Mr. Nixon was innocent — and with the possibility of criminal action against the President stirring a further wave of public revulsion with the whole process.

Not guilty: Sometime during the summer, the House votes articles of impeachment by a three-to-two margin, and after a fierce debate — with the same tactics applied above — the Senate refuses to convict by the necessary two-thirds vote. Quite conceivably public opinion, already soured on Congress, might take the Senate's refusal to convict as a vindication of Mr. Nixon, and the equation of national power might shift decisively against liberal forces in Congress and the media. (If a Nixon recovery seems impossible, I would make two points: First, that people are not good at understanding legal technicalities — witness the semantic bewilderment over impeachment — and second, that history abhors a stalemate of powerful institutions. Besides, as Machiavelli said, if you are going to try to kill a king, you had better succeed — or watch out. Arthur Schlesinger has expressed similar fears that acquittal would legitimize the Imperial Presidency.)

Things have come too far for resignation, but some of the "relative danger" arguments being made seem foolish. Given Mr. Nixon's current disrepute, his resignation would probably cause much less of a national earthquake-cum-polarization than can be expected from impeachment. Absent convincing new evidence, impeachment will be far more disruptive — unleashing treacherous political dynamics and emotions — than the second-rate political scientists at both ends of Pennsylvania Avenue are saying.

Looking back Post editor says prove that charge

100 YEARS AGO
Appleton Post, May 7, 1864.

The Crescent charges us with inconsistency for having opposed the granting of (liquor) licenses before election, and endorsing the action of the council after election whereby licenses were issued.

We could simply remind that sheet its reputation for veracity is not so exalted that a mere statement by it will pass for the truth.

If we opposed the granting of licenses before election, or even after election, it must be that some article or sentence within an article can be produced from a previous issue of the Post on this point. If so, will the Crescent oblige us by presenting such a quotation. Until then its charge will have little force.

Sailplane derby won by 52-year-old pilot

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 52-year-old Cumberland, Md., corporate pilot has won the 3rd annual 2,900-mile cross-country sailplane derby, narrowly edging out a 34-year-old Los Angeles resident.

William C. Holbrook, chief corporate pilot for Kelly-Sprongfield Tire Co., scored 7,881 out of a possible 8,000 points to defeat Hannes Linke by 45 points in the race that began May 1 in Los Angeles and ended at suburban Dulles International Airport.

Over-30 males more likely periarteritis target

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please explain periarteritis. What is it, what causes it, what is the treatment? —B.L.

Periarteritis (also known as polyarteritis nodosa) is one of the puzzlers. We know what it is, we have learned to treat it, but the cause is open to considerable speculation.

The disease involves inflammation of the blood vessels, primarily the small and medium sized arteries.

Because it can occur in any part of the body, or in several areas, the symptoms vary, depending on location and the number of blood vessels involved. Muscle tenderness and weakness are rather common symptoms. Others, which may or may not occur, include joint pains, skin lesions, changes in vision, even lung and heart problems.

A majority of patients have some form of kidney involvement which may (or may not) result in abnormal urine and high blood pressure. If intestinal blood vessels are affected, vomiting, diarrhea and stomach pains are possible.

So you can see from this that there is no way to describe a typical case, but it occurs more often in males past 30 than in females.

The cause is not known, but there have been reports in various cases that it might be a sensitivity to certain common drugs, sulfa, penicillin, iodides. But it would appear that no single cause is likely.

The most effective treatment is with a cortisone preparation, using high dosage at first and then tapering it off to the amount needed to control the condition. This may have to be continued for months or longer. But —and this is hopeful — occasionally spontaneous or complete clearing up of the disease occurs.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Second request. Do you know of any effective treatment for neuritis of the optic nerve in back of the eyeball? —Mrs. F.H.

This is an example of the kind of question I can't answer with any assurance. Causes of such trouble range from infection to poisoning to multiple sclerosis. Once the cause is determined, there's a basis for selecting a treatment.

In many instances, no cause may be determined. Under such circumstances, corticosteroids (cortisone-type medication) may be used by mouth or by injection.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My daughter-in-law, who is like a daughter to me, does one thing that worries me. She lets household pets lick the dinner dishes clean. First it was a dog, now the cat.

She is soon to have her second baby. Her little boy is 5 and a picky eater and I worry about him eating off the same dishes that are just washed with our regular dishes. I think animals should have their own dishes. Am I a fussy grandma? —Mrs. A.W.

You're probably worrying about nothing, although I agree that pets, for the sake of proper pet training, ought to have their own dishes. It's also easier to keep track of how much you are feeding the pets, and what.

When dishes have been thoroughly washed and rinsed with good hot water, there'd be precious little chance of passing on any germs, any more than there would be if somebody else at the table was coming down with a cold or the epizootic or something, and left germs on dishes or silverware. The washing, scalding and then drying would make them safe.

But I still think pets ought to have their own dishes.

"You Can Stop Sinus Trouble" is the title of Thosteson's newly revised booklet explaining what sinus trouble really is and encouraging sinus sufferers to do something about it.
